Anne,

I remember last year when you signed my Vista. It was so sad to leave the old place, but now looking back this year didn't turn out so bad. You've got the "grooviest" looks at South plus a personality to match. Keep up your smile because everyone loves it. I want to wish you all the luck in the future with everything you do. Well... here's to summer and our next to years at South.

Always,
Ann Robertson

– Anne –

To a real great (good looking) girl in my English class. Best of luck this year and next. Keep up the A's.

Dear Grapes—

I wonder if I'll end up writing on this whole entire white page. (?)

Well, Annesy, ~ now that we have become big South Side Sophomores + have nearly become actives in G.V., I guess that we're supposed to feel different. But, for some reason, I think that I'm still the same fat half-wit I used to be.

I must admit that this has been "the" year for me — you know, with Steve. And last year was your year. But Luck switches and I predict that your cool lifeguard (or whatever) will happen upon you next August (late August, of course.)

If you don't like this guy I'm predicting for you, just call me any Saturday night (I'll be babysitting) and you and I can have a hot time playing gin-rummy. You know we really did have a good time at Western Reserve, the Sectional track meet, and Culver.

Don't flirt too much while I'm in Europe. (You have a knack for such things!!) And keep your eye on SHG for me. I hope that you're as lucky as I was ~~this~~ this year, when it comes to finding a friend.

Well, my thumb is sore, so ~ keep looking dowdy + we make a great pair some day.

Good Luck in Junior Year,

Jeanne

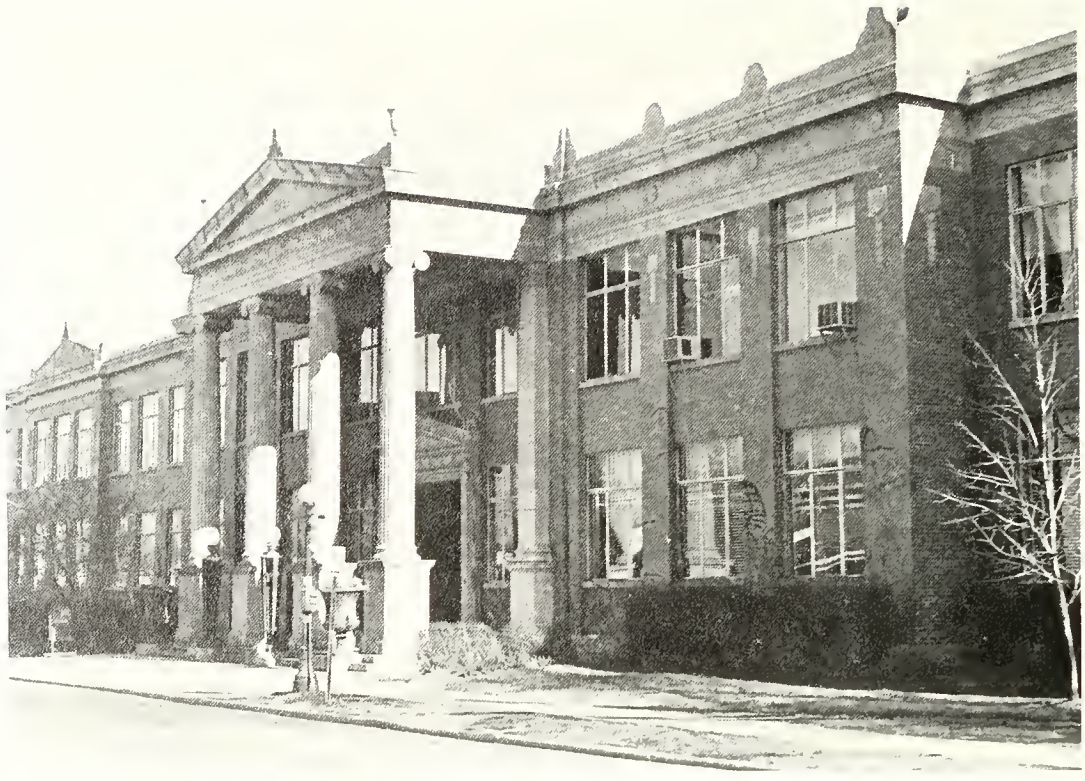
South Side High School

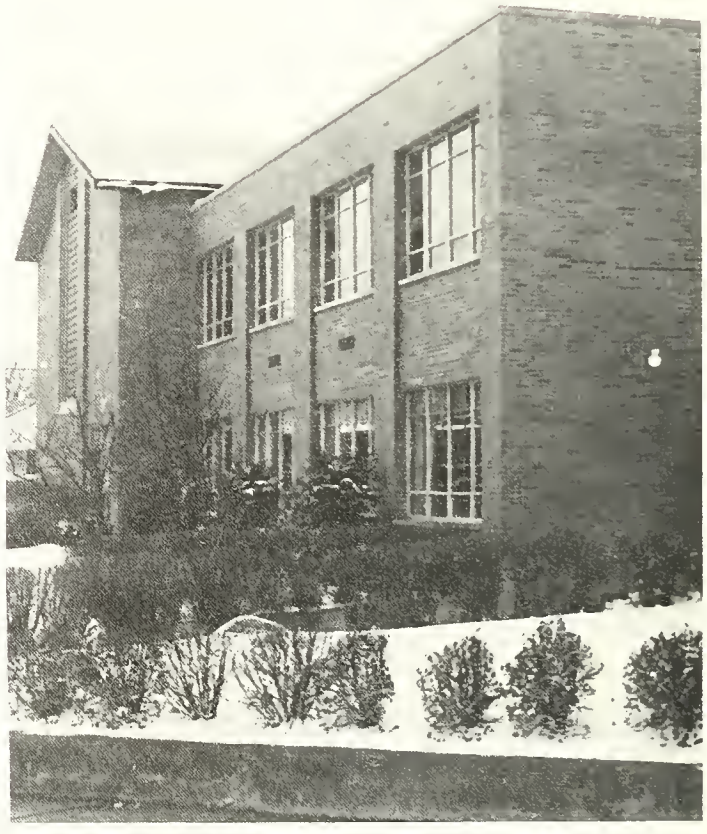
Fort Wayne, Indiana

Volume 46



Calhoun Street's main door handles most of the flow of Kelly students and is the one most often viewed by persons passing the school.

With the closing of another week of school, the Oakdale entrance to South Side becomes deserted until school begins again Monday.



Ivy-covered walls and stone columns were abandoned for the more modern style that houses the girls' gymnasium and the cafeteria.

To an Archer,

It's . . .

bells, crowds, chatter, breaks, clock-watching, and ramps. It's studies and friendships coupled with the unremarkable parts of a day. It's changing your mind a dozen times before making a decision or listening to announcements in homeroom. It's rushing for the cafeteria line, hearing the 3:20 bell, missing your ride home, or getting an "A" on that big test. It's winning a close football game or losing your gym supplies. It's neglecting to do your homework assignment or being the only one who did remember to do it. It's a friendly chat with a teacher or forgetting your locker combination. It's joy, sorrow, frustration, relief, anger, or pride. It's everyday, and it's South Side . . . To an Archer.

Open lunch offers chance to break routine of Arriving early at school is Senior Andrew McDonald on the way to a morning appointment with a teacher or an organizational meeting.

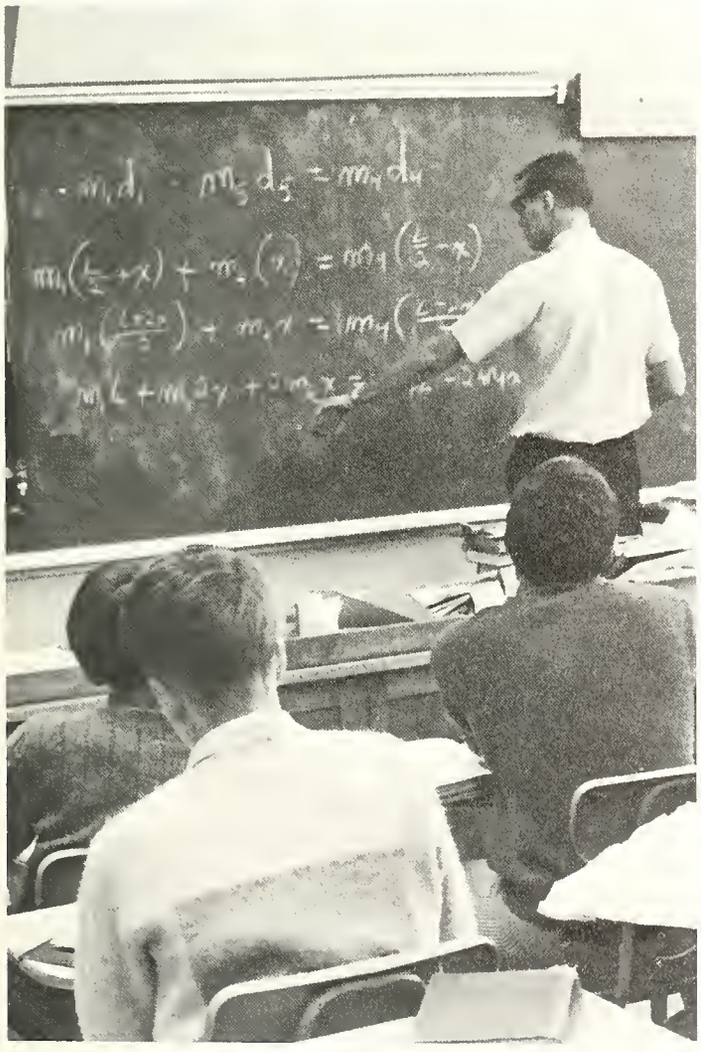
Days vary as do moods and capabilities, but each one is defined by the basic patterns that become so routine to an Archer over three years. Each is filled with fifty-five minute periods and five-minute breaks; each includes the necessity of a homeroom period and the privilege of an open lunch hour. And, the moments of opening and dismissal exist identically each day. Yet, class schedules can't design the friendships and events of a person's life. Nor can the ringing of final bells cancel an interest inspired in class.

Archers enjoy sharing invaluable bits of information each morning when they stop at their lockers to exchange books and shed coats.

Archers meet in the gym before homeroom to chat with friends, finish last-minute assignments, or just catch up on the latest news before the ringing of the first bell scatters students through out the building to their various destinations.

classes, relax after forenoon work

Both students and faculty members use their twenty minute homeroom to plan some of the activities of the day.



Homeroom yields to formal classes and the more serious study of the languages and sciences that provide a strong curriculum.

Seldom absent from the entrance to the cafeteria are the eager salesmen encouraging Archers to support their particular activities.

Archers scan own action through conduct of An Archer's everyday is his own. It is his recollection of the learning and teaching and talking that goes on about him continuously. He works within the frame set up by clocks and graduation requirements, but he also acts for himself. Everyday is a chance to enjoy his friends and to know them better from observing them in pressured and normal situations. To some, everyday is only something to do, but to others it's a challenge—the challenge of finishing an overload of studies while facing the burden of demanding and time consuming extra-curricular responsibilities.

Working diligently in study hall to complete his homework for the next day is Sophomore Dayn Boitet who likes his extra study time.

Val Bjork and Bob Laster enjoy lunch together but have also come prepared with books to do some studying before their next classes.

A Kelly wistfully walks down the ramp towards home after a day filled with English, math, lunch with friends, and talk in the halls.

friends in many posts

Three South Side students patiently wait for rides and friends on Calhoun Street after school, the daily procedure of many Kellys.

Another day comes to a close for this group of Archers as they prepare to leave the classroom after the dismissal bell has sounded its consent.

Feelings, moods influence actions of Archers

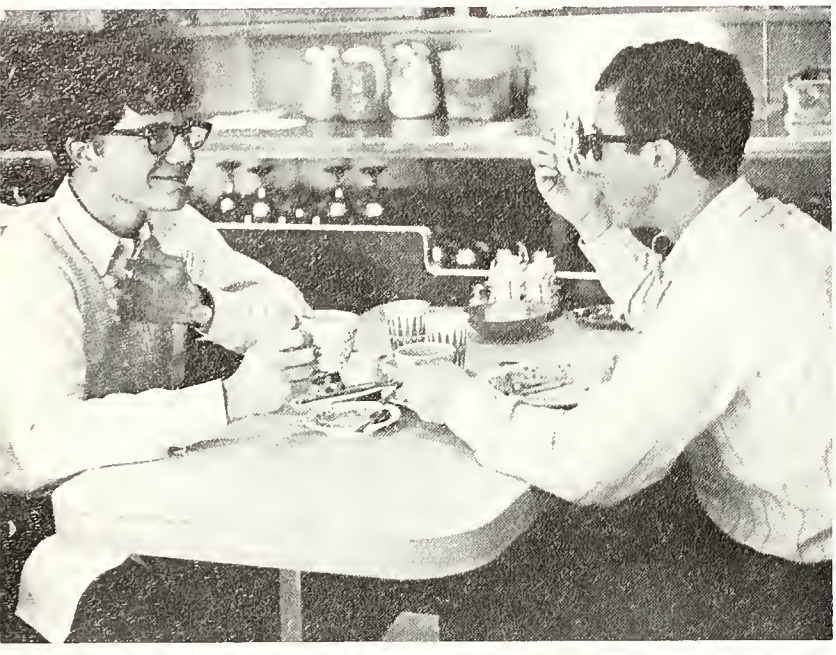
Coach "Porky" Holt worriedly points out some weak spots and mistakes of this year's basketball team during an exciting encounter.

The amazed-yet-pleased look when a Kelly finds his name on the Top Scholars Board or the stricken, crushed feeling of a girl who didn't make cheerleading are emotions which make a Kelly student a versatile individual. Within mere hours, an Archer can go from the disillusionment of failing a test to the exuberance of one who has witnessed his team become victorious. Frustration, excitement, grief, delight, sorrow, envy, love, and wrath are just some of many emotions which play a part in making a South Sider.

Bitter cold only increases the intensity with which varsity cheerleaders Tricia Hunt, Ann Spear, and Bev Gouloff watch the contest.

Acquaintances, assignments, and out-of-school plans all merit discussion during free moments. The freedom shrine for South Side's World War II veterans establishes a basis for pride and security in Kelly students Ann LaMar, Gonzalo Godoy, and Jane Campbell.

Teens discover favorite recreational activities,



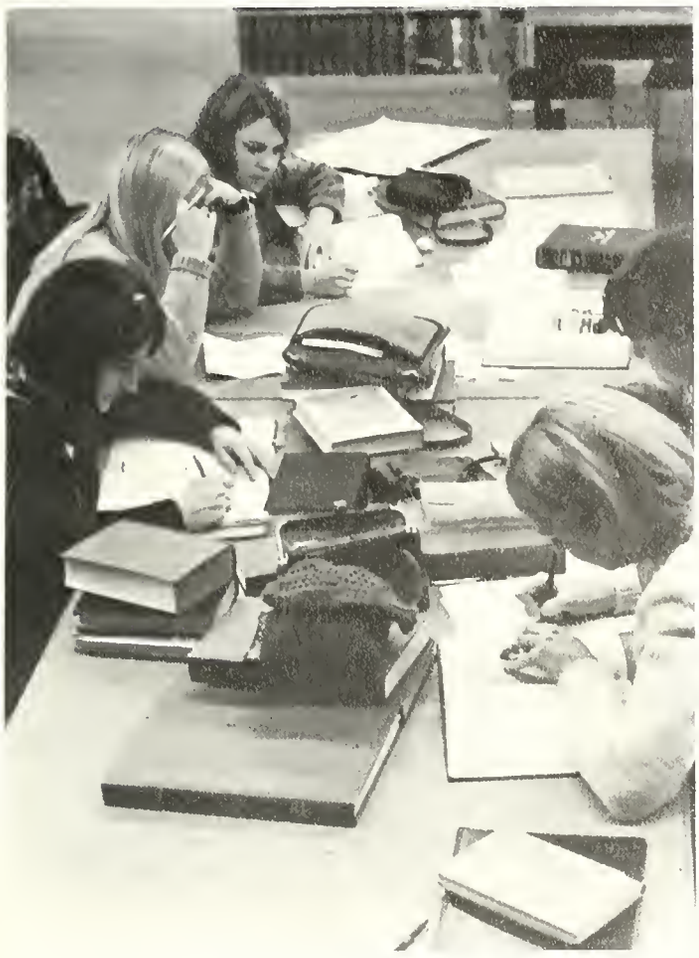
Seniors Eric Ornas and Tom Lampe smile over their conversations as they take time out from the daily rush to eat lunch at a restaurant.

Sophomores Ann Robertson, Cathy Maier, and Cindy Hess find the deer at the Children's Zoo to be both hungry and quite friendly.

Archer boys eat a leisurely lunch at Hall's and leave the crowded cafeteria to their friends at South Side.

gathering places around city of Fort Wayne

Homework and the continuing pursuit of studies dictate much of a student's life, but teens discover outlets in their free time that provide the variation necessary to a balanced high school life. They frequent spots that are reserved for their use and develop friendships through the acquaintance of a friend of a friend or a common fascination for "The Mamas and the Papas". Some prefer quiet talks about the future or the chance to share secrets, but almost all Archers have some interest around the town they enjoy turning to.

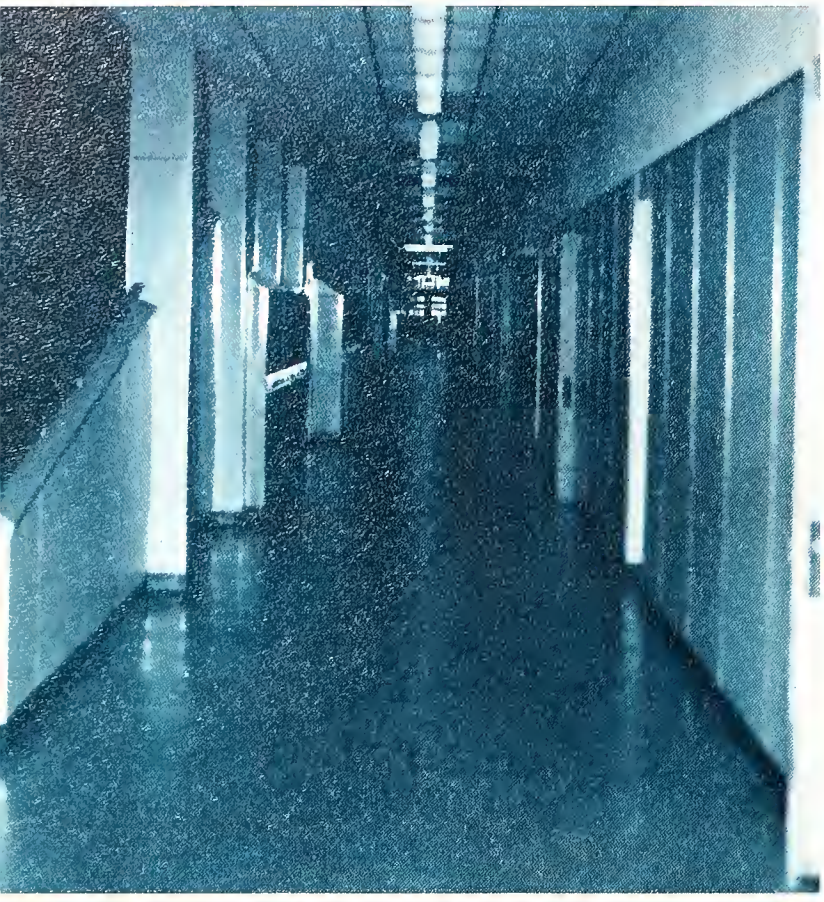


The downtown library provides a quiet place to study for students who are finishing assignments or even just searching for a book.

In recent years, Hall's has become a favorite meeting place for South Siders at lunch, after school, and for dates in the evening.

A basketball, a backboard, and a few friends are the only things which are needed to have a rousing game of cold, brisk basketball.

Presence, absence of Archers form contrasts



Smooth shines and hazy reflections accentuate the shadow-pronounced corners and angles of a corridor abandoned in the evening.

Elbows and hands support the heads of concentrating students during an afternoon study period in the adapted, quiet school cafeteria.

An occasional slide rule and scattered notebooks indicate that the cafeteria is useful for study purposes even during the lunch hours.

in personality of ordinary school surroundings

Some things like chalk, erasers, and blackboards never seem to change; but even these constants have contrasting forms with the presence or absence of Archers in South Side. No more than minutes mark the transition of a study hall to a cafeteria or the rebuff of a student lingering late in the halls as an intruder into the silence of darkened classrooms that welcomed him as part of the group during the day. Nor is any corner of South Side free of these contrasts which form the personality of the school and make it the remarkable institution that it is to an Archer.

With lunch lines closed and studying Archers absent, the cafeteria is only a large area of chairs and tables and irregular aisles.

The sharp perspective of front hall becomes less conspicuous with the haste of Archers changing classes or hurrying to club meetings.

School, studies not only interests of students;

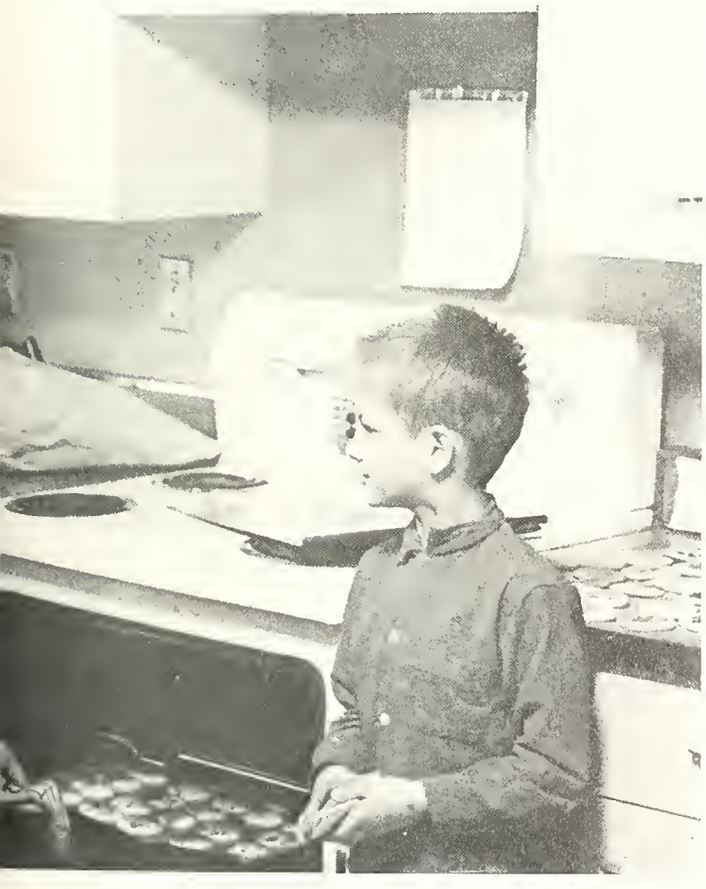
Using some of their spare time to serve the community of Fort Wayne are Sophomores Nancy and Peggy Roehm, who are volunteers at the Lutheran Hospital. Working in the physical therapy ward, the girls give a heat lamp treatment to a patient in their care.

Putting her high school Spanish and English to good use, Senior Jeannie DeVore teaches a Spanish woman conversational English.

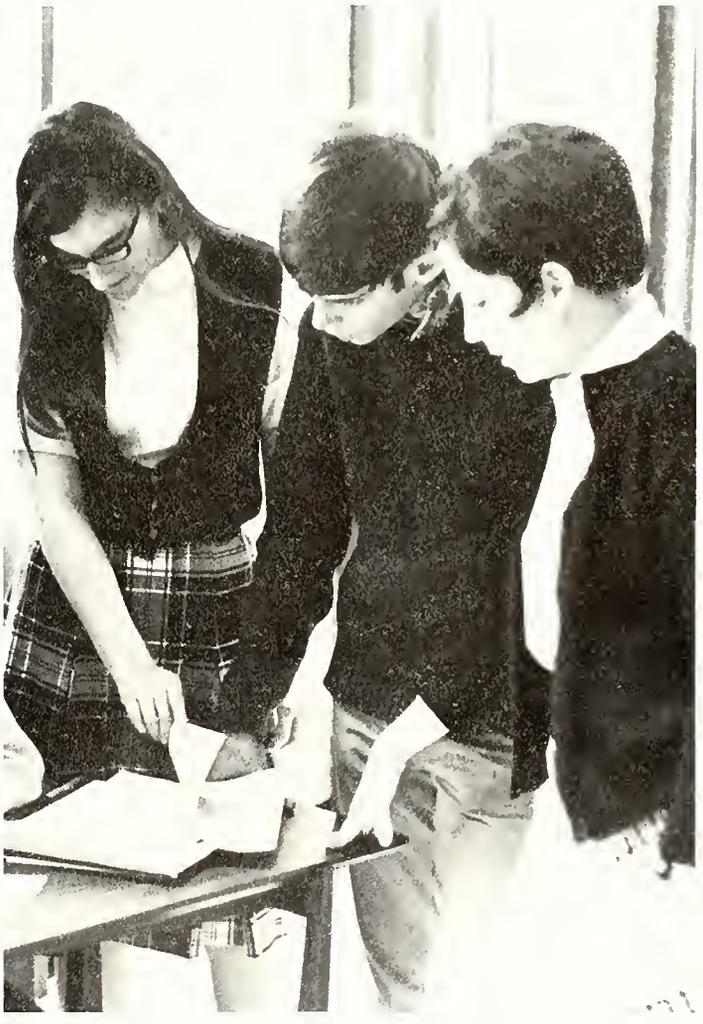
Baking cookies for the smaller members of First Presbyterian's Craft Club is just part of the job of Seniors Ann Hoard and Julie Inskeep.

many volunteer service

Youth Council members Margaret Eberly, corresponding secretary; Steve Kimbrough; and Cari Small offer ideas for coming activities.



The final bell signals a great flocking to center hall and an equal visiting of lockers. Teachers remain late in their rooms, and students join them for extra explanations. Then, the halls clear of people as Archers extend their talents to activities outside of school. Some express career interests through tutoring or working with children. Others seek additional involvement with teen-oriented organizations such as the Allen County Youth Council and Medical Explorer Post. Finally, many Archers seem to find pleasure in serving the community.



Searching for ideas, Medical Explorer members Kaye Fichman, Gordy Siegel, and secretary Barb Martin discuss plans for future meetings.

Homecoming game precedes queen crowning,

Beaming happily at the crowd of Archer football fans who elected her queen, Sheryl Nelson shows her pleasure by shedding a few tears.

Eyes moist with the sting of frosty fall air and the luxury of queenly tears might begin a sketch of the 1967 Homecoming. All eyes focused on the faultless tackles and team thrust that blinded the possibility of an Archer loss. At halftime, the spectators' fieldward glimpses of jerseys and flying cleats were replaced with a row of ten queen candidates and their letterman escorts each awaiting the crowning ceremonies. Senior Sheryl Nelson won the crown and reigned over the dance celebrating a powerful victory over the Huntington Viking football squad.

During the playing of the Huntington Viking game, Archer gridders and coach rejoice at the scoring of another South Side touchdown.

Enduring the extremely cold temperatures which are a part of fall football games, Archer fans watch intensely to see how the gridiron squad will fare.

first of school dances

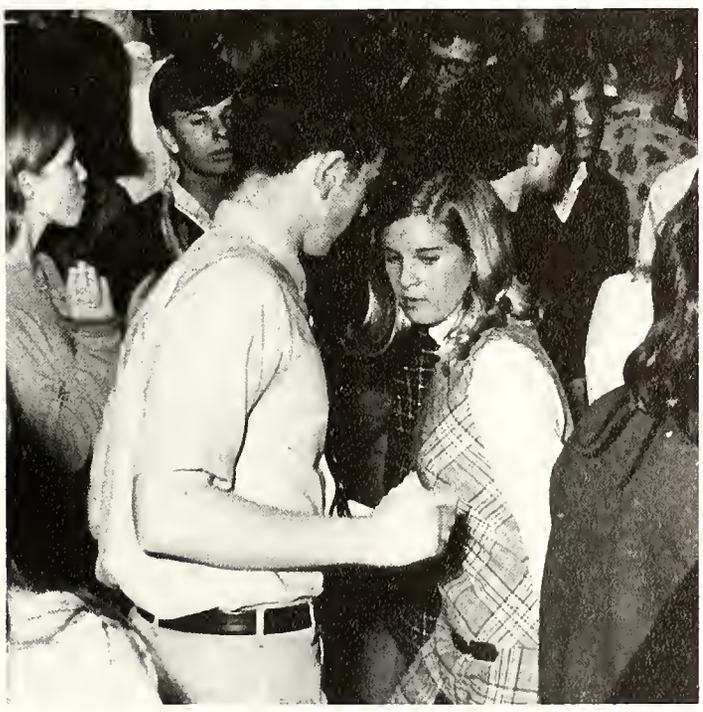
Arrangements for dances—decorating committees, chaperones, and bands—began with the basketball season. Meterite members frequented the gym and cafeteria during the week preceding the first home game with tickets for "Psychedelic Soul". A pre-Christmas Sadie Hawkins dance, "Belles and Beaux", was organized by Philo's girls.

Lettermen and cheerleaders sat for silhouettes that decorated their second-semester King Kelly ceremony, while Hi-Y boys finalized plans for black lighting and engaged the Imperial Soul to play at the Queen of Hearts dance.

The 1967 Ivy Day Queen, Jan Jones, and court Shelley Long, Sally Reitdorf, Liffy Keck, and Linda Young await the planting of ivy.

Licensed to treat themselves to cokes, Mike Kilcoin and Steve Griffith sit back and watch during a lull in the refreshment business.

These Archers dance and talk before the announcement of the selection of Queen of Hearts from the "Sweet Sixteen" nominees.



Senior Jon Byer and Sophomore Anne Graper dance to the music of The Society at the lettermen's and cheerleaders' dance.

Sports thrills, yelling manifest deeper spirit of school involvements

Spirit cannot be a constant feeling, nor is it always obvious. Prodded by team drive or fierce rivalries, it becomes an infectious energy. But spirit most often is more subtly established in a student's desire to involve himself in the flow of interests that make up the school. Pride grows from these involvements and impresses the contributing student with the enthusiasm fostering club projects and the aims backing school-wide activities. Still, the most openly displayed is the vibrant spirit that accompanies slight victory and close defeat in competitive sports contests.

The Hi-Y sponsored bus trip to Warsaw ends with an abundant snack stop for Linda Smith and Bill Watson near Fort Wayne.

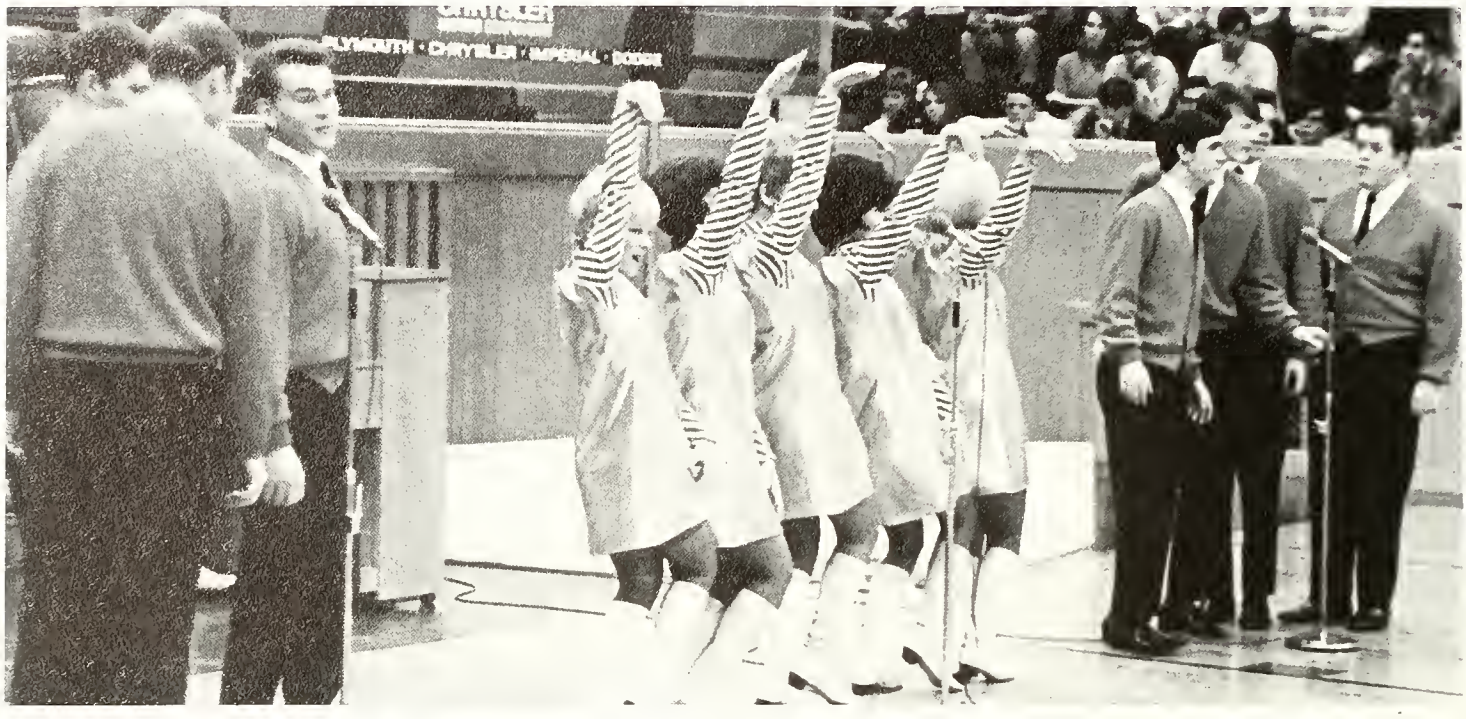
Ecstatic over a skillful Archer basketball play, Sophomore Dorothy Long leaves her seat with a springing jump to release her praise.

Hours of practice, scrimmage, and game play are the basis of pride and spirit that form a team from a group of independent boys.

Putting on a command performance for the students are members of the junior class who stage a pie-eating contest at a pep session.

Overburdened by studies or extra-curricular activities, one Kelly finds herself unable to stay awake during a morning pep session.

Dedication to school formed by past, present



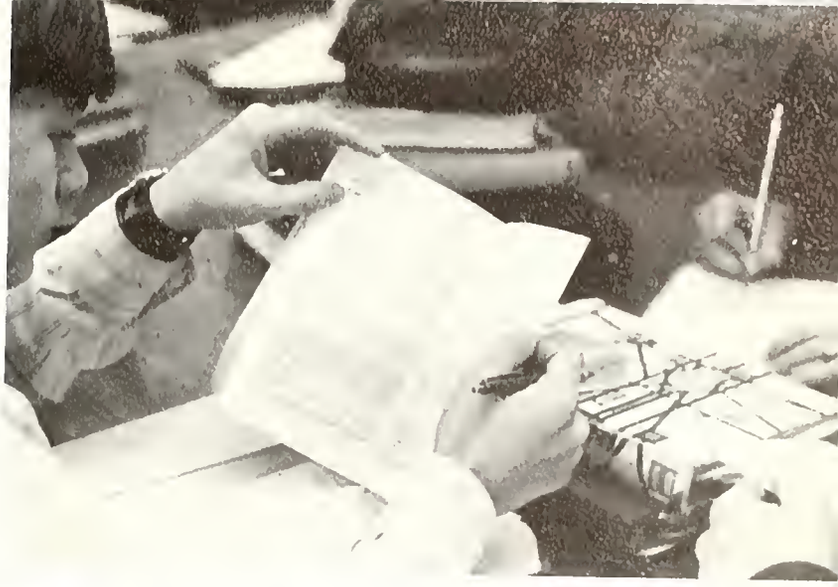
Performing at an assembly on motor safety are the musical Spurlows who travel throughout the United States to encourage safe driving.

Mrs. Louise Jones and Miss Barbara Schneider remain at school long after the halls clear of Kellys and still face much night grading.

Early morning research by Archers is made possible by the 7:30 arrival of library staff women such as Mrs. Dayna Simpson.

efforts of individuals

Past educators, athletes, and students have devoted hours and years from their lives to South Side. Perhaps their endeavors have formed a spirit that explains the dedication almost overlooked by us—the dedication of athletes passing long after-school hours in practice and incorporating training restrictions into their lives, or of photographers attending sports contests and recording spectacular moments of competition. Nor can the teaching profession be overlooked as dedication to the purpose of enlightening curious minds.



Hands relate thought and study of Archers devoted to learning the ideas offered them in their classes by dedicated teachers.

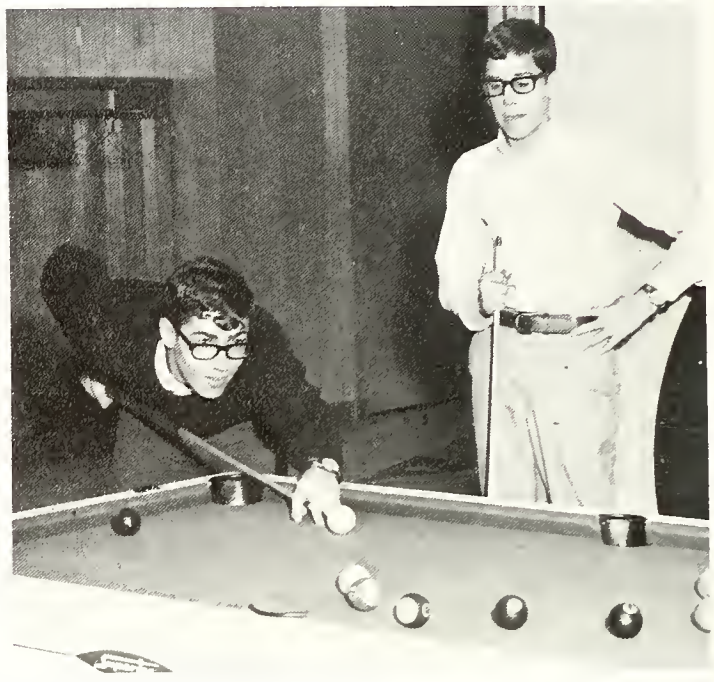
Friendships start with

Largely restricted to the purposes of exercise and fun, backyard basketball stirs friendly rivalries that lead to countless games.



Sophomore Rick Penny puts all his ability into lining up the ball as classmate Fred Simon contemplates approaches to his next shot.

Sophomores Lynn Mansbach, Nancy Schmidt, and Ann Robertson get together on weekends to discuss school, listen to records, and read magazines.

chance meetings of Archers in halls, classes

Even when surrounded by clowning boys, Junior Susie Armstrong and Senior Julie Inskeep take the opportunity to exchange words.

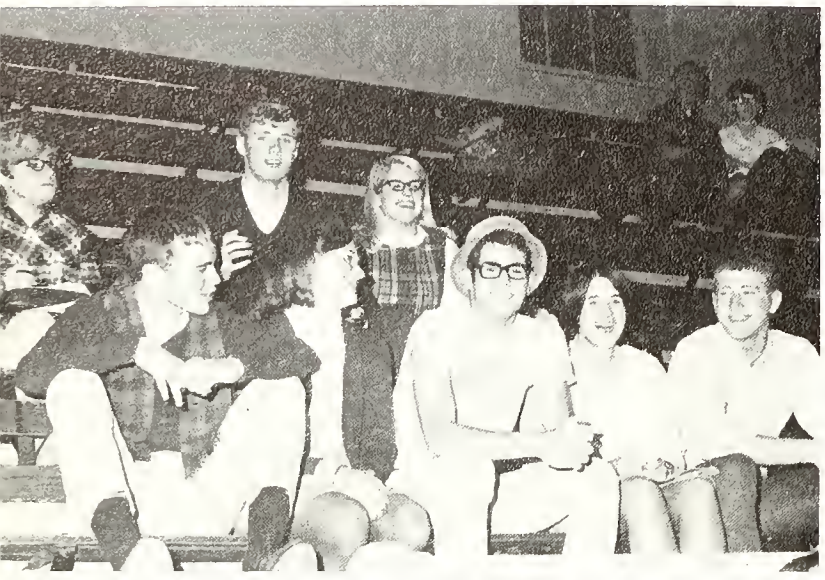
Students enter South Side each fall, students who can decide what qualities they admire in others and what personalities they appreciate in friends. Boys may search for basketball opponents, girls for companions on shopping trips. Somehow from the annual influx of people, faces become acquaintances and then friends.

True to their reputation, many girls enjoy each other's company for talking and "goofing around". Boys, too, include these two pastimes in their pursuance of athletic development, scholastic betterment, and simple fun.

Kelly shoppers Terri Simon, Nancy Skelton, Linda Crayton, and Sharon Bedford browse the shelves for clothes to be purchased.

The chance to play a few hands of cards prompts Senior Dick Dickmeyer to invite Al Hofer, Steve Mansbach, and Greg Spiers to a Saturday game.

Kelly boys, girls go to games, dances, movies



The Dads' Club-Faculty Basketball Game draws Archers who view the opposing squads and comment on their styles and form.

During their years at South, the Archers' circles of companionship widen to include the friendships that exist between boys and girls. Casual friendships develop by the accidental arrangement of a seating chart and the eventual discovery of a corresponding sense of humor. Walks from class to class, talks during lunch hours, and dating on weekends, perpetuate the chance to know and appreciate each other's personality and values. Discussions over pizza or a banana split following a game may reveal more about a personality than hours of class contact.

Weekends bring the opportunity for Kellys Scott Salon and Lee Ann Penny to take in a movie and stop afterwards for something to eat.

— Anne —

I couldn't help reading some of things that other people wrote about you, and I sincerely say that they are all very true. You are a real great girl, and I know that you always will be. With a brother like Gordon you can't help but be. Although this year has went fast I think you realize that South Side isn't such a bad place after all. I remember last summer when you said that South just wouldn't be too groovy. Well I hope that you changed your mind.

Next year you will be a junior. How does that sound. Not much difference between being a sophmore or a senior but it sounds a little better. So, that is about all I can say other than good luck, and stay the way you are in the future.

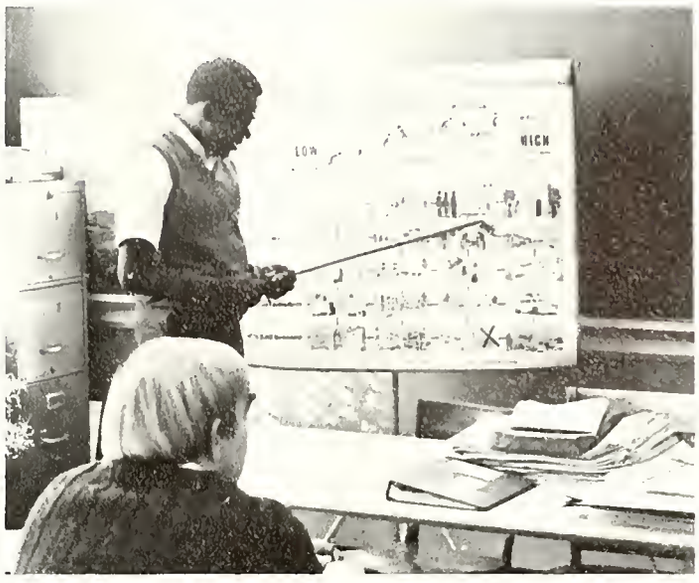
Classes study past to gain insight into present

Preparing students for active citizenship by making them knowledgeable about their country and awakening them to current events—these are the aims determined by the curricula of the Social Studies Department.

Classroom lecture and discussion provided the basis for an exploration of new ideas. Documentary films enlivened the study of the past. Maps, charts, and other visual aids were also used to advantage. This background information facilitated an understanding of current events reports in magazines and newspapers.

Sophomore students studied the history of the world beginning with primitive man while the juniors explored U.S. history in depth. Special projects and book reports were requirements in these courses.

During the first semester, seniors studied governmental structures, traditions, and political systems. A course in economics, sociology, or second-semester government was then offered. Economics students discovered the basic principles of wealth production and distribution. In sociology classes, problems in society and developments in social institutions were discussed.

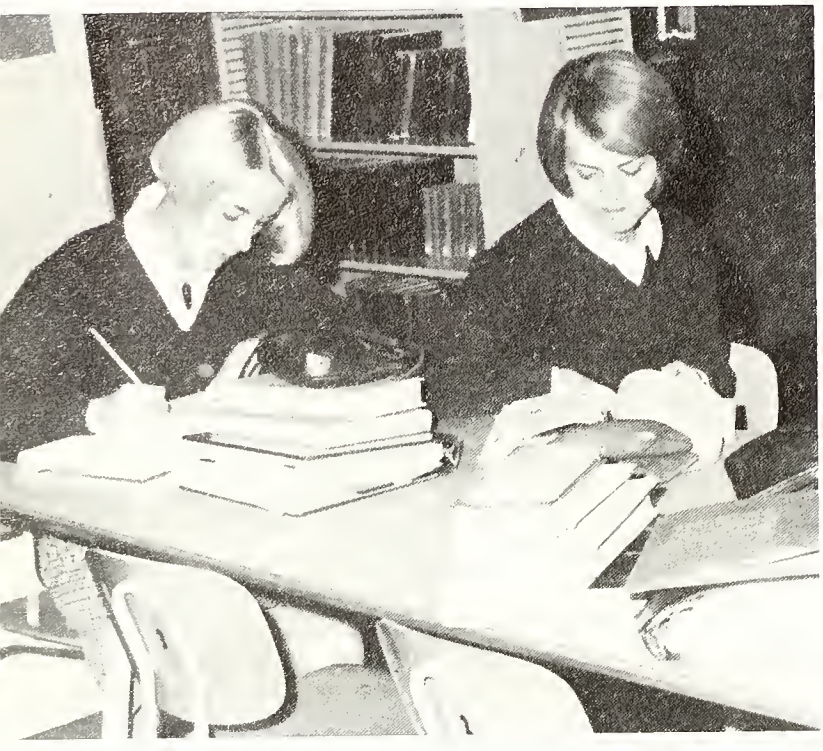


Senior Lorenzo Stewart is called upon to explain the statistics represented on a chart used by the economics class in studying income.

In preparation for the weekly discussion of current events, sophomore students of world history peruse news weeklies and take notes.

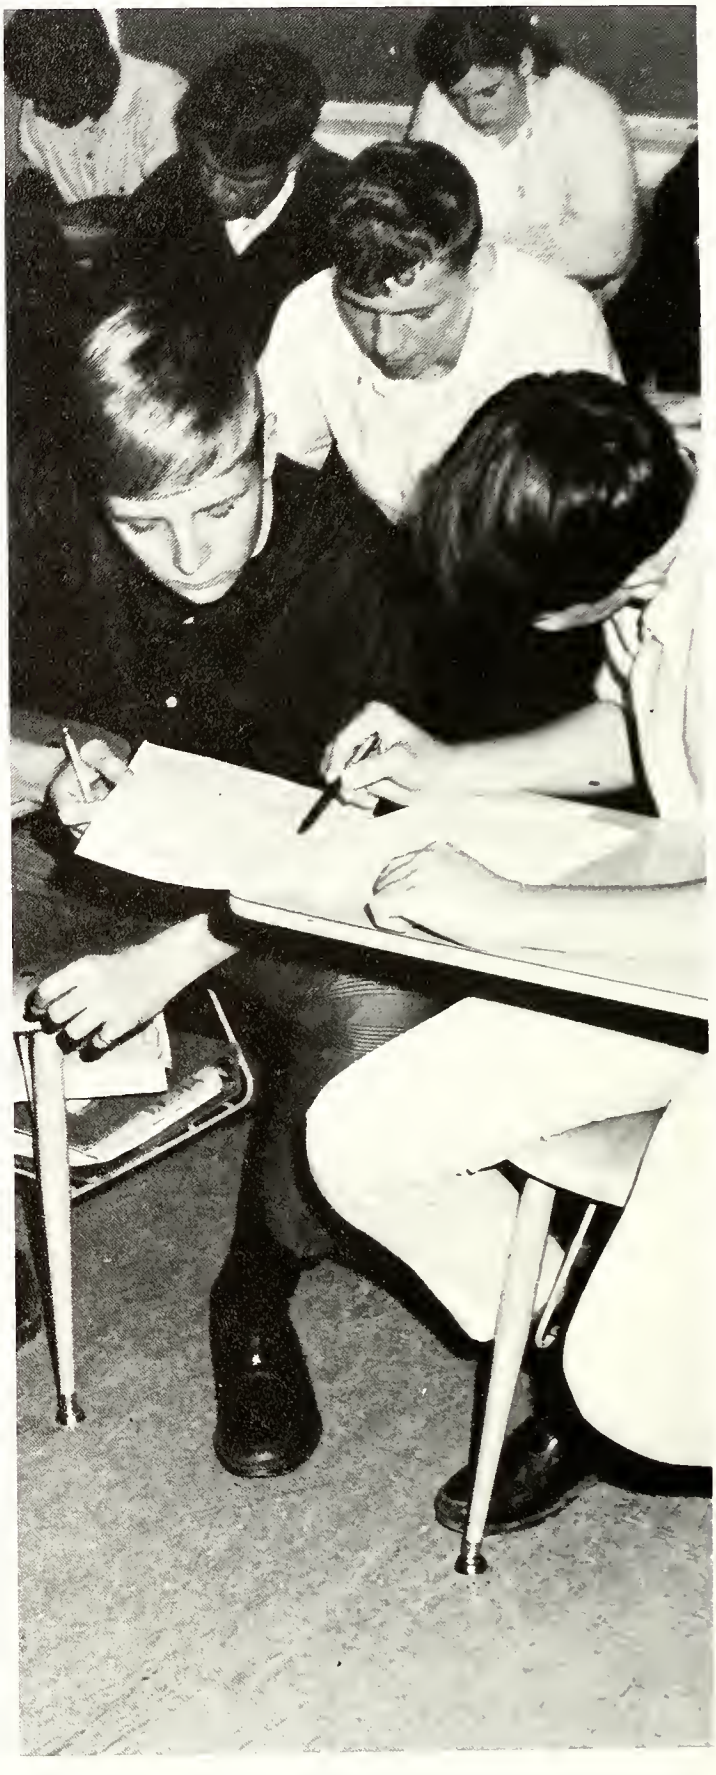
Answering questions about a chapter in history class is just part of the job for a history teacher such as Mrs. Margaret Hilmert.

English study promotes better self-expression;



Seniors work industriously in the library and use reference materials for literary reports, an important requirement of English 7.

A student uses a shadowscope to improve her reading speed and comprehension in developmental reading, a nine-week course.



For sophomores, learning to write book reports and themes in class means questions about grammar rules and paragraph development.

special class created

Writing book reports in class and reading American literature introduced sophomores to South Side's English Department. After reading Silas Marner and The Pearl, the classes turned to the classical influence of Shakespeare's "Julius Caesar" and the more contemporary spirit of "Our Town," a play by Thornton Wilder.

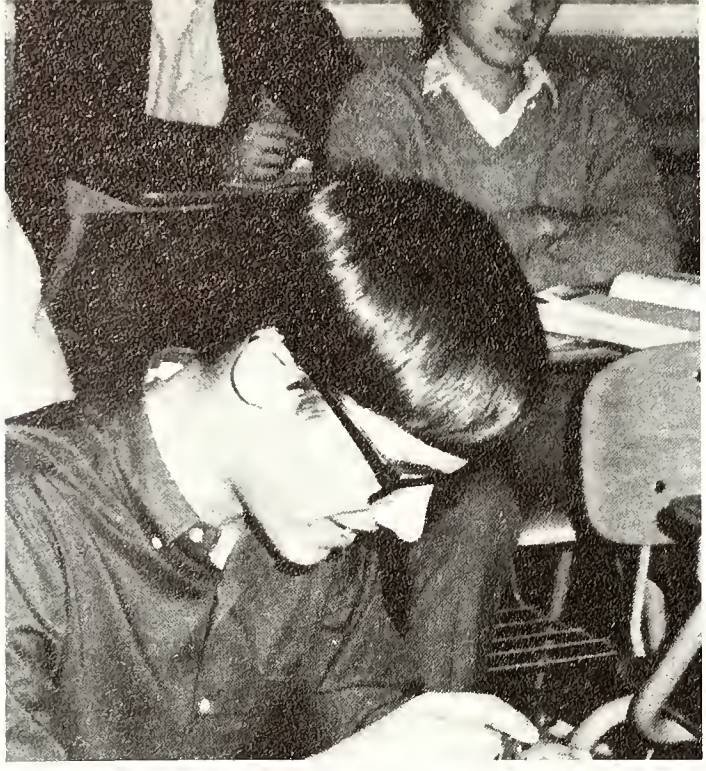
Note cards, bibliography lists, and preliminary outlines filled the second semester of junior life as research paper due-dates neared and memories of recitations of "Macbeth" and the study of the epic, Beowulf, faded.

The fabled hour-long book report loaded seniors with hours of research and documentation for both the oral and written presentations of their books. They also developed their methods of analysis through writing numerous critiques of plays, poems, short stories, and essays.

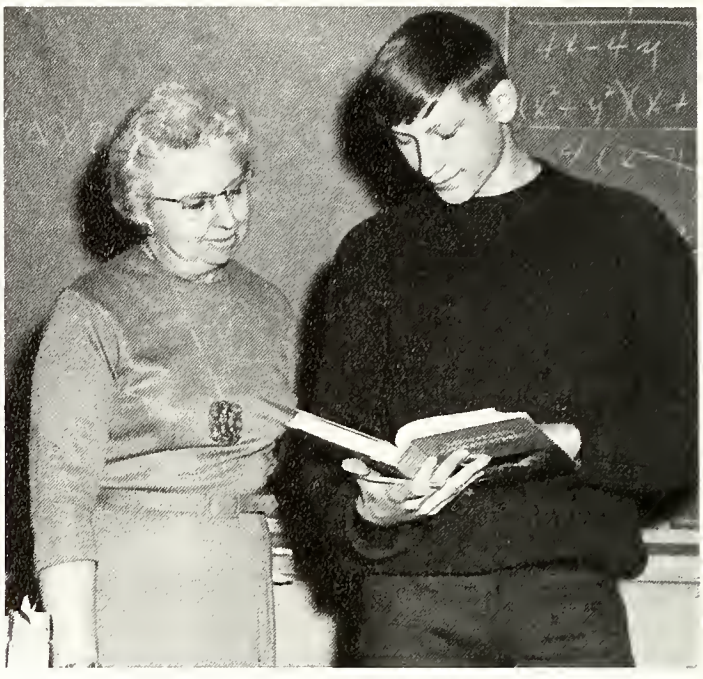
Equipped with new ideas, a combined political science and contemporary literature course, team-taught by Mr. Ralph Bogardus and Mr. David Cowdrey, was added to the curriculum. The 30 seniors in the experimental class made use of the correlation between the two subjects by reading and discussing material useful to both. Special English classes for sophomores and juniors were also continued.

Mrs. Florence Emshwiller and English 5 student Sally Markley discuss content and the correction of grammatical errors in a theme.

A round table discussion directed by Mr. David Cowdrey and Mr. Ralph Bogardus is a regular feature of the new English-Government class. The students gather to present certain authors' opinions and offer their own thoughts on political essays such as Plato's "Crito."



Geometric constructions are the object of Steve Kreischer's attention as he employs compass and protractor to finish his assignment.



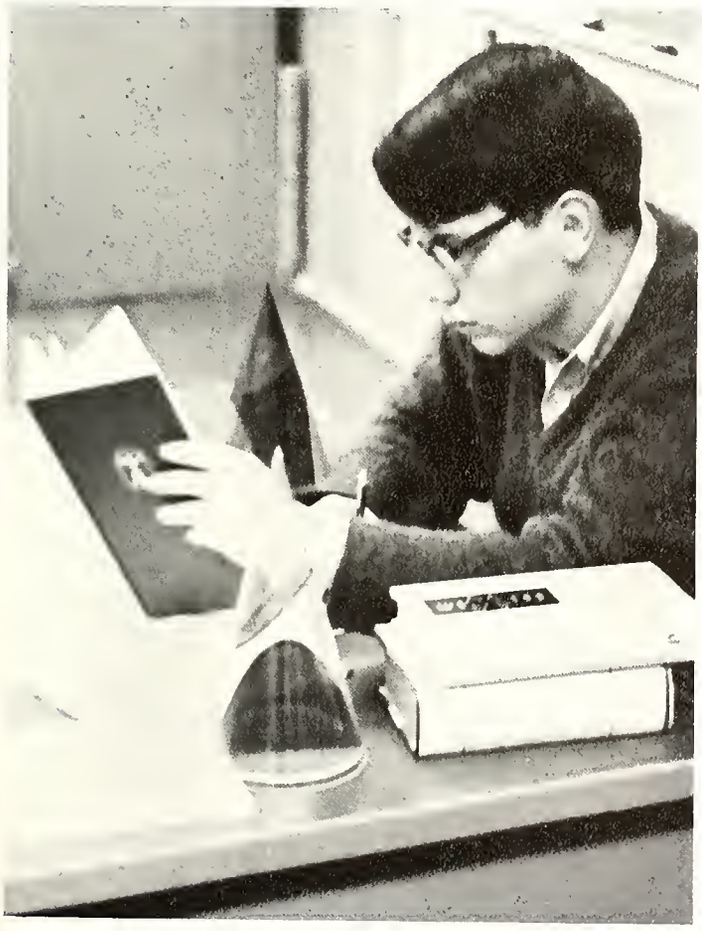
Sophomore David Emenhiser is puzzled by a difficult geometry problem, but his teacher, Mrs. Mildred Luse, is willing to offer help.

Mathematics courses require proficiency with

Mr. Richard Sage presents a review of the fundamentals used in graphing inequalities as he lectures to his sixth period mathematical analysis students.

With time to spare before the end of the period, advanced algebra students begin to prepare the exercises for the next day's lesson.

numbers, ability to think rationally, abstractly.

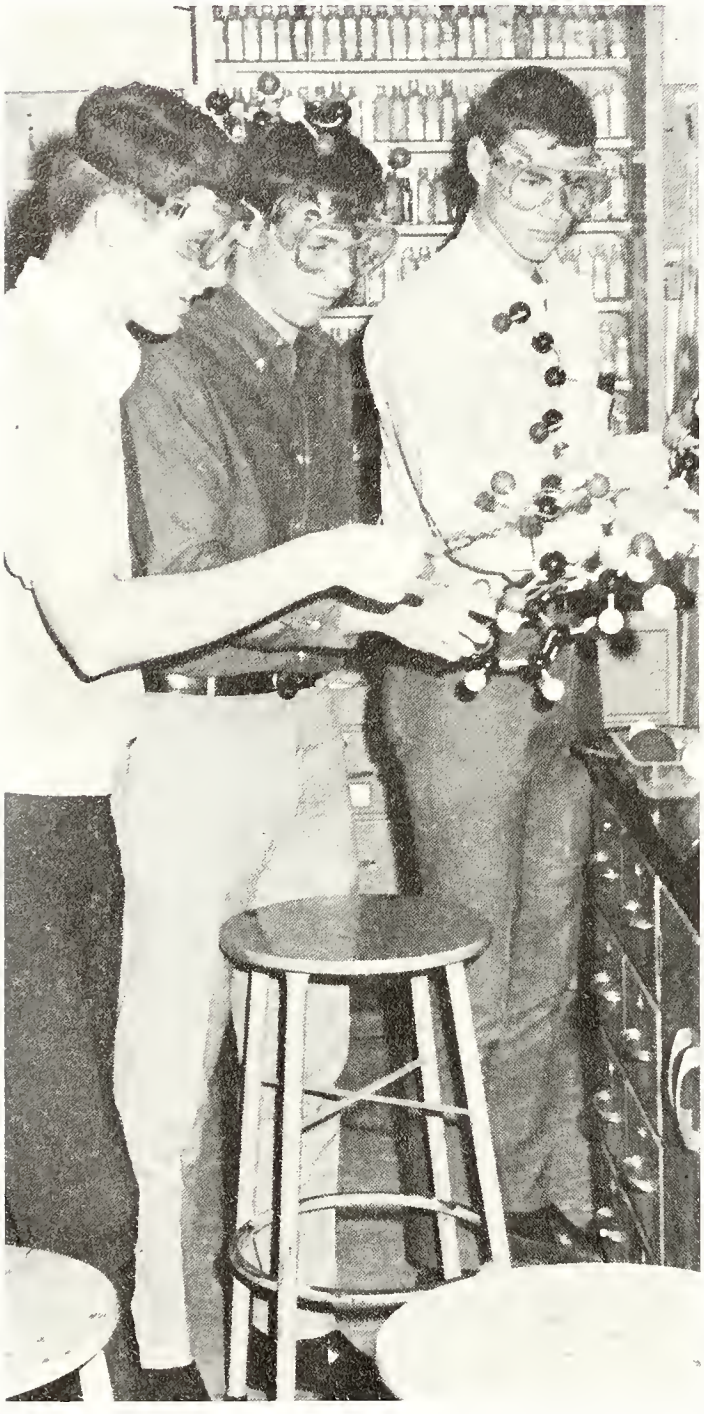


A member of the seventh period math analysis class, Senior Jon Zorn increases his understanding of course material by reading.

Sines, cosines, abscissas, mantissas—the teachers in South Side's Mathematics Department presented these and many more concepts to their students. The first mathematics course at South, algebra, accustomed the student to set theory, operational properties, and basic techniques in equation-solving. The methods and principles of algebra were combined with logical thought in proving geometric theorems and corollaries. Students were also introduced to constructions and solid geometry.

Students could elect to continue studying mathematics in a course in advanced algebra, which included an intensive study of curves and more complex equations. A trigonometry course followed. This study of angle relationships, functions, and logarithms was supplemented by introductory units of analytic geometry, mathematical induction, and probability. Students in the accelerated program were offered a course in mathematical analysis. They examined abstract systems and used basic mathematical principles and theories in studying logic and the calculus.

Students study wave motion, learn reactions,



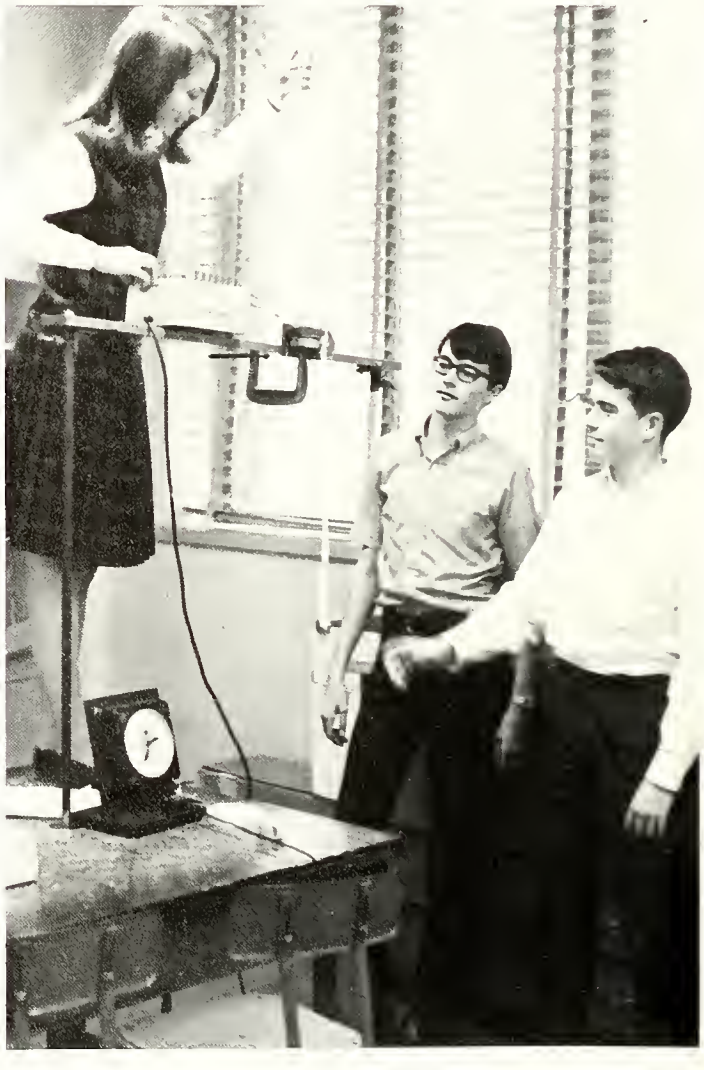
Special chemistry students, Seniors Chuck Fay, Bill Turnley, and Paul Nelson, are intrigued by the complexity of molecular models.

Through their safety goggles, chemistry students perceived chemical reactions as they performed experiments in the lab. Students employed the scientific method in their observations. Much time was spent in memorizing the valence table and studying voluminous notes on the structure and properties of compounds. The special chemistry class delved into atomic and kinetic theories, chemical bonding, and the "whys" of chemical occurrences.

Botany students studied plant formation and classification with the aid of microscopes. A study of cellular structure and function was included.

Through films, lectures, and experiments, physics students sought to explain natural phenomena of energy, matter, and force. Numerous problem sets tested their ability to combine their knowledge of physics and mathematics. The applied physics course dealt with the practical applications of basic physical laws.

Topography, geology, meteorology, and the formation and preservation of our natural environment were studied in physical geography or earth science classes.



Junior physics students Nancy Howard, Don Sinish, and Cliff O'Neal perform an experiment to study the acceleration of falling bodies.

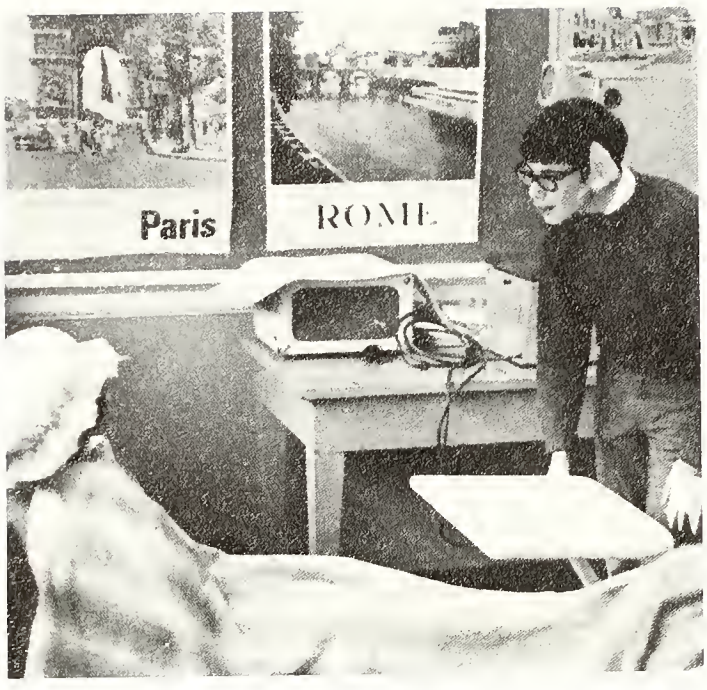
collect specimens, discover scientific challenge

Nancy Howell indicates the information on a map, while Pat Tierzen observes the weather instruments on a physical geography project.

Botany student Dennis Lake ponders his answers to a "weed quiz" before examining and attempting to identify the next plant specimen.

The chemistry lab is a busy place as these Seniors perform tests to identify cations and ask their classmates about surprising results. The "long" and "short" of it is that students learn basic chemical reactions and discover the characteristic properties of substances.

Language lab polishes



Senior Bev Gouloff and Sophomore Mark Rozeen present a scene from a French dialogue of "Little Red Riding Hood" in their class.

Mr. L. R. Roberts dictates and makes notations on a grammar lesson while the German 3 students copy his comments in their notebooks.

A third-year language class listens to the example set by Spanish-speaking, Gonzalo Godoy, Roberto Martinez, and Tim Erdel.

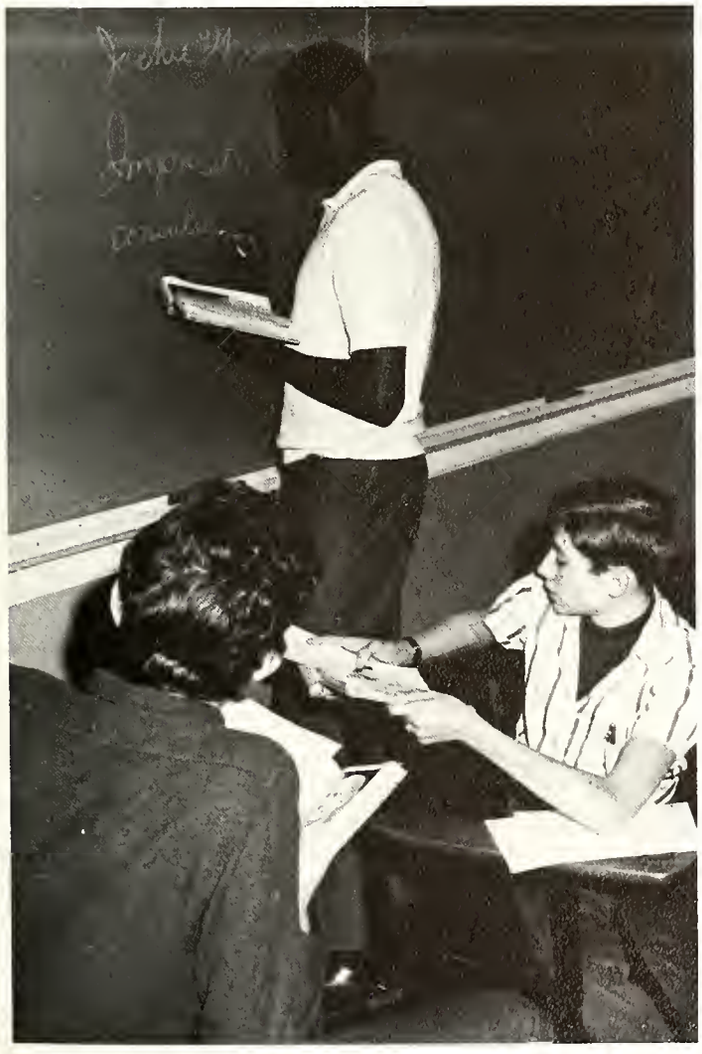
nderstanding, pronunciation of lingual classes

Students discovered that the strange voice with the foreign accent coming through the earphones could be their own when they used the language lab. The new facilities enabled teachers to emphasize the audio-lingual phase of foreign language. Prospective linguists improved pronunciation and tested their comprehension with recordings.

First- and second-year French students concentrated on pronunciation, conversation, and French culture while third- and fourth-year students wrote compositions and read Vol de Nuit by Saint-Exupery.

Latin students first learned the fundamentals, verb forms, and noun cases. They then studied the Roman civilization and translated Caesar's Gallic Wars and Vergil's Aeneid. Grammar, pronunciation, and conversation were stressed in beginning German courses. Later, students read the novel, Der Millionar.

In the first two years, Spanish students became familiar with pronunciation and grammatical constructions. In third- and fourth-year classes, speaking was emphasized along with a program of readings in Spanish history.



Jackie Winn subjects his Latin translation to the careful scrutiny of his fellow first-year students, Art Wilson and Steve Claypool.

Enclosed in booths, foreign language students intently listen to tapes and record their responses in a weekly session in the lab.

With practice, students

Seniors Linda Knettle and Dianne Demetre operate a duplicating machine for Mr. Leon Dolby and learn a fundamental office procedure.

The Distributive Education program introduces Bill Lee to valuable experience in retail salesmanship while he works in a local store.

Maureen McCray, senior business student, puts to use her ability to file material quickly and accurately, a routine office skill.

Beginning typists become familiar with the keyboard with practice drills that determine a student's progress in speed and accuracy.

acquire abilities needed in business vocations

A salaried afternoon job for full academic credit was a feature of the new Distributive Education program, under the direction of Mr. Robert Wray. The course, open to juniors and seniors, combined a morning schedule of classes and at least 15 hours per week on-the-job training in marketing, merchandising, and management.

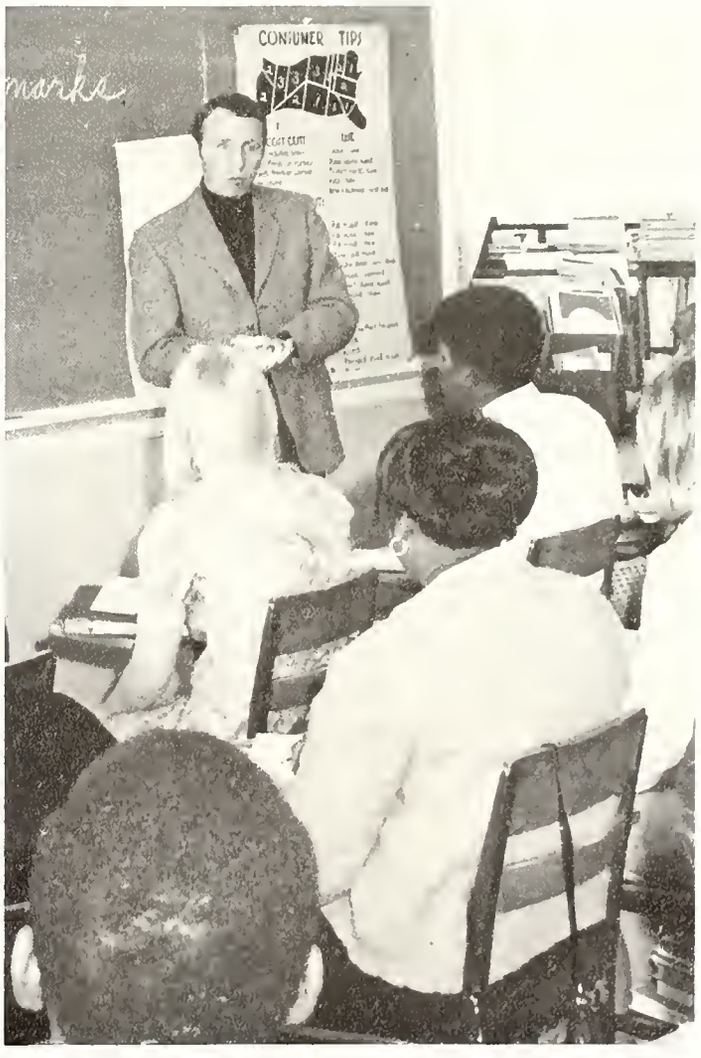
Other courses in the Business Department were divided into stenographic, clerical, and general business branches. Students in business organization and management studied the formation and operation of small businesses. Classes in business law were concerned with the legal procedures of licensing, selling property, and contracting.

Merchandising stressed retail salesmanship, while marketing was a study of consumer problems and budgeting.

Clerical and stenographic students took dictation in shorthand and transcribed it on typewriters. Working with business forms and letters required a knowledge of filing, spelling, word usage, and mathematics. Prospective office workers also acquired practice in operating calculators, dictation devices, and duplicating machines.

Students in Mr. Robert Wray's class in marketing, sales promotion, and management observe the operation of new advertising equipment.

While future secretaries typed business forms, other students enrolled in the Department's one-semester course in personal typing.



Mr. Robert Kelly lectures to his second-period business law class on the legal phases of sales and consumer-producer relationships.

Girls gain practical knowledge of domestics

Everything a well-rounded homemaker needs to know, from sewing on buttons to French tailoring techniques, and from boiling water to preparing a buffet dinner was taught to the students in South's home economics courses.

In the department's traditional sewing classes, girls learned how to operate the sewing machines; and they studied the care and uses of various fabrics. Students gained practical experience and added to their wardrobes by making garments. Members of the clothing classes displayed their skill as fashion designers and seamstresses and their poise as models in an original fashion show.

Cooking classes concentrated on meal planning and preparation accompanied by a study of nutrition and etiquette. The home management course stressed the techniques of household care and finance budgeting.

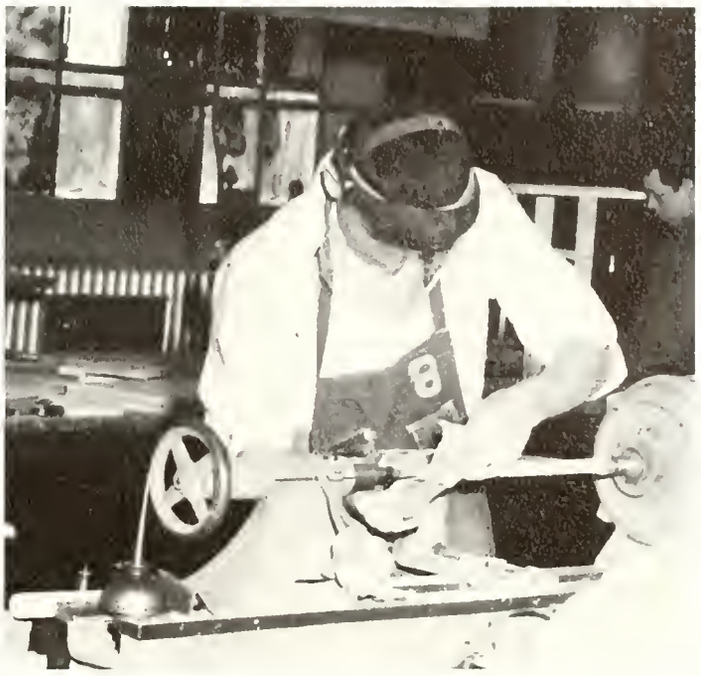
In child care classes, students bathed infants and engaged in a play school project. This project not only enabled them to observe a child's physical, mental, and emotional development, but also allowed them to gain insight into the joys and problems of child rearing.

Home Ec students Bonnie Bender and Brenda Calland anxiously watch, ready to help Karen Kessler remove a cake from the oven.

Diana Ahlersmeyer gains first-hand knowledge of the play habits of small children by observing Jennifer Daniel, who seems delighted.

Sewing students, Shelia Huseman, Diana Stephens, Linda O'Connor, and Janell Graue prepare to model their tailored suits and coats.

While Brian Todd watches from above, Mr. Kenneth Surber instructs Dave Dial and Greg Stilwell in the use of a motor testing device.



Before completing his work at the wood lathe, Bill Evans stops to sand a rough spot on one of the legs of his woodworking project.

Shop students design, create useful products

Pride in finished projects and the development of a "critical eye" were products of an experience in industrial arts. The students learned the latest working methods by using the new metal-cutting band saw, tracemaster drafting machine, and electrical testing panel.

Students in the drafting course practiced lettering and designed blueprints. With fundamental guidelines and isometric and orthographic techniques, the boys worked with pictorial sectioning and production illustration.

In metalworking, the uses of the micrometer, lathe, and drill press were taught. A study of precision measurements, tool grinding, arc welding, sheet metal layout, and advanced machinery followed.

The safe use of hand tools, wood lathes, and joiners impressed the woodworking students with the necessity of planning and applying skills. Students followed their drawings in making products. A power mechanics class instructed the boys in the nature of the internal combustion engine, and a study of eletrical equipment and motors comprised a "fundamental electronics" course.

Tom McRae's fellow students in Mrs. Mary Jane Crum's fourth period speech class register various reactions as they listen intently to his speech and notice his gestures. Speaking before the group is a frequent experience, but the orators also practice writing.

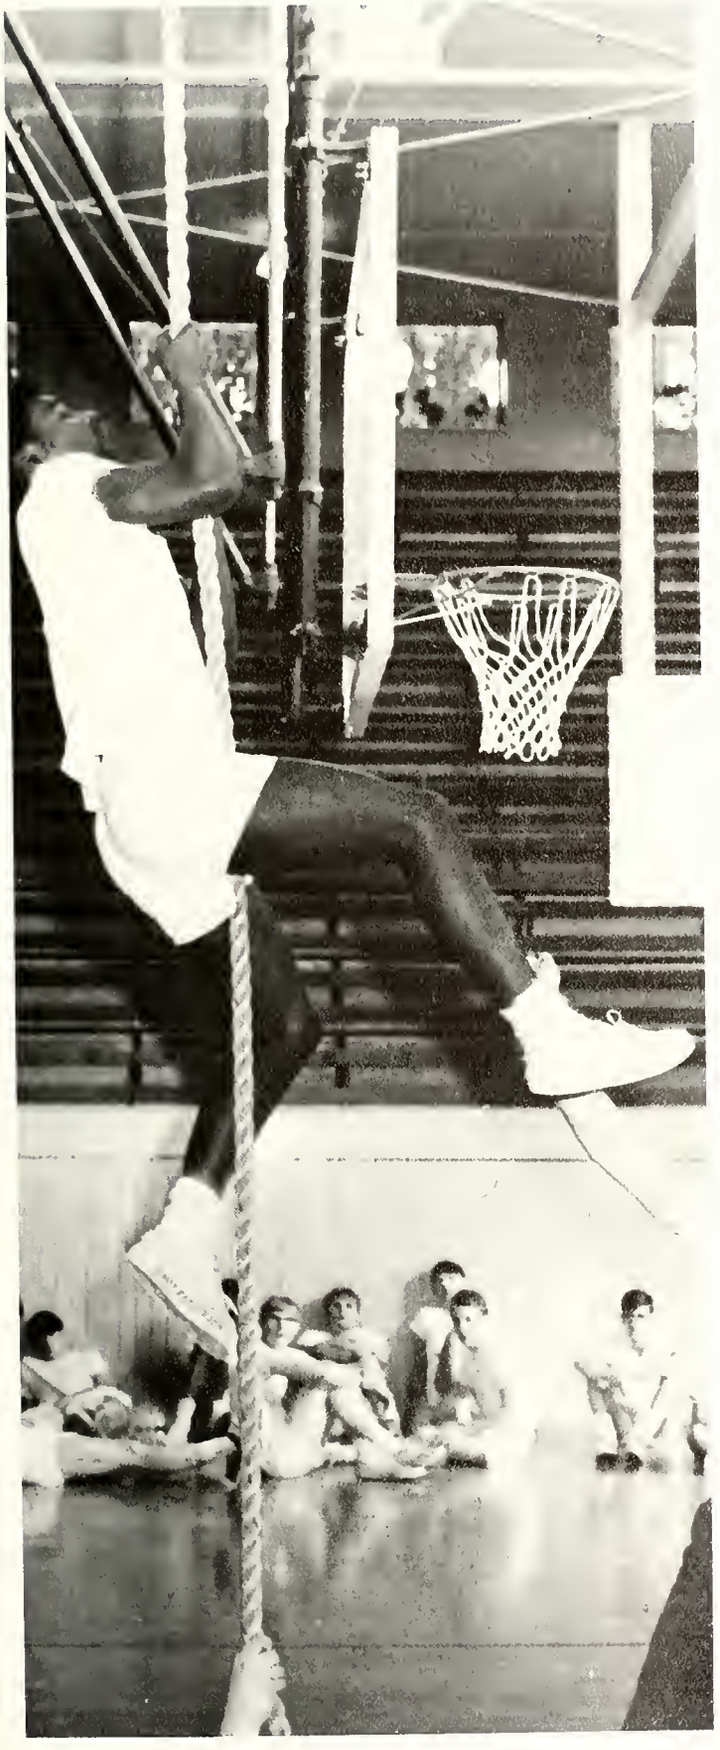
Journalism, speech build communication skills

"Tombstones," "kickers," and "mug shots" were common concerns of journalism students as they discussed the elements of newspaper composition. A critical examination of several high school newspapers, including the Times, aided students in recognizing journalistic techniques. They applied their knowledge of effective communication by writing news articles and feature stories. Students also learned about advertising, copyreading, and the other phases of putting out a paper by helping South's newspaper staff and by visiting Fort Wayne Newspapers.

Oral communication was the subject of interest to speech students. They were exposed to interpretive declamations including humorous, dramatic, and oratorical speeches. Students acquired confidence, poise, and an effective manner of delivery by speaking extemporaneously and offering memorized selections. With practice, students learned to write and present speeches to influence, inform, and entertain a group. They also practiced making introductions and accepting and presenting awards. The course included a study of drama and debate methods.

Future journalists learn to recognize points of style and form by analyzing news, editorial, and feature articles in school papers.

Physical education encourages strength, agility



Sophomore Larry Patterson builds his strength and endurance as he struggles in a rope climbing test and is timed by Mr. Clair Motz.

Teamwork, sportsmanship, coordination, and fitness were promoted in the physical education program. The trampoline, mini-tramp, and springboard were established parts of the schedule of classwork for most students.

After learning the rules, boys engaged in competitive sports such as football, soccer, basketball, volleyball, track, and softball. Supplementing these seasonal sports was a self-test program in rope climbing, push-ups, and obstacle races to determine endurance and coordination.

Gymnastics and advanced gym classes developed the Archer boys' balance through exhaustive experience on the parallel bars, ring set, and horse. The acquisition of this new equipment boosted the value of the course.

The girls in regular gym classes participated in speedball, track and field, badminton, softball, and basketball in addition to work with the new balance beam. Students in dance class limbered themselves with exercises and then developed grace through practicing ballet movements. They presented routines in the Spring Show, and the tumbling classes demonstrated acrobatic feats.

Gail Lochner and Betty Carpenter practice movements and exercises on the balance beam in order to develop poise and muscle control.

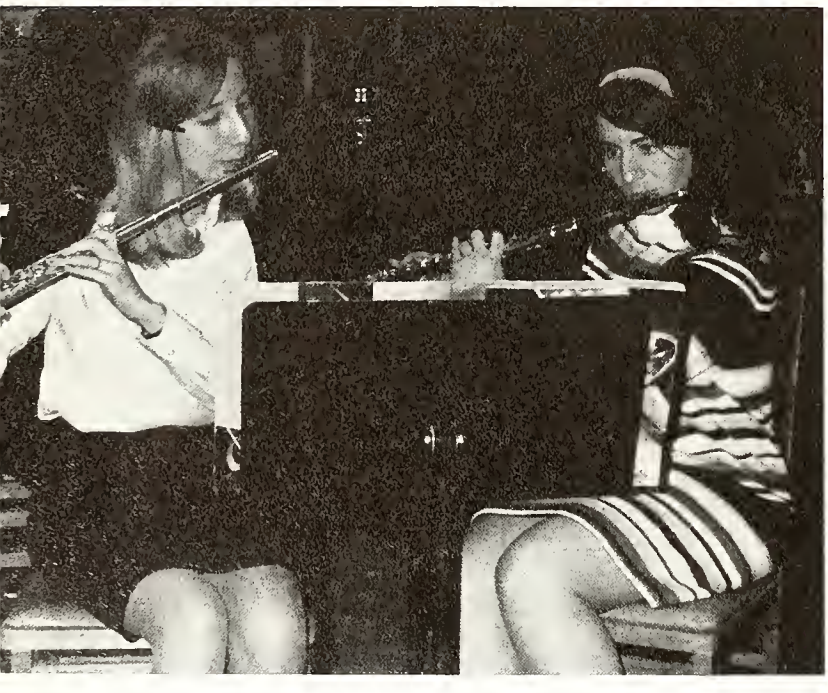
Mr. Hostetler directs the Concert Choir in a brief warm-up session before the group provides musical background for Senior Reception.

The various voices of the Training, Occasional, and Concert Choirs, directed by Mr. Lester Hostetler, made appearances at assemblies, junior high schools, churches, and business functions. An activity for the Senior members of Concert Choir was the annual caroling through the halls third period of the day before Christmas vacation.

The instrumental sections of the Music Department, Band and Orchestra, were headed by Mr. Robert Drummond. The band, which performed at games, assemblies, and concerts, was divided into training and symphonic sections. The Orchestra, String Group, and Brass Choir also appeared before the student body. In music appreciation, the students discussed modern and classical music and learned to identify specific works of famous composers.

In the fine arts curriculum, the Art Department offered a first-year study of two and three dimensional art. Second year was spent in the exploration of materials and techniques which were put to use in the student's selection of an area of specialization. Art appreciation classes featured a study of the philosophies of painting, sculpture, and architecture in various periods and works of art.



Band members Laura Wise and Becky Schwartz realize the importance of sectional rehearsal as they practice a difficult flute passage.

Art 1 students, John Rose, Kevin Parrot, and Debra Amstutz experiment with mediums while Cindy Gidley, service worker, circulates.

Anne,

There's not much I can say to somebody who has been such a good friend for a long time. We've had our ups and downs, and our good and bad times, but we've trusted through all of that. I feel that I can talk to you quite freely and probably more so than anyone else. I know I've thanked you before for helping me thru all my depressing moods. And I probably will need your help much in the future, when I'm at home. I hope that I've been good enough friend to help you. Remember whenever you need someone to make you feel a little bit better just come on over. You're really a great kid Anne, and much good luck will come your way eventually. You deserve it after a "nothing" year. I have to admit — I've been really lucky this year. Next year will be my "nothing" year. Bwaaa!

We've had ~~such~~ a riot this year that I know this summer and next year will be even cooler, because I will have cars!

Well I better start bringing this to a close. But I mean what I wrote, and take it easy when you start hustling the boys because you might have the prob. of too many on your hands!

Kelly gridders win 7, Lose 2 from rugged Schedule of opponents

Under the superior guidance of Robert Gernand and his staff, South Side's small, hard-hitting football squad fought to an outstanding season record of 7-2. The Kelly team, to the surprise of some people, was in the thick of the city series race throughout the season. With only one game remaining to be played, South was tied with Concordia and Bishop Dwenger for the coveted city crown. Archer hopes for the top position were shattered for the second year in a row when a determined Central Catholic team upset the Kellys in the season finale.

Despite the disappointment suffered in the Central Catholic game, this team performed well in defeat and so confirmed its members' ability to maintain a stable attitude of sportsmanship even through a painful loss. Its winning record boosted South's three-year record to an unbelievable 24-3. On the way to this highly successful season, the boys' tremendous spirit and drive helped to provide Fort Wayne with some of the best high school football on record. Excitement, frustration, thrill, victory, and defeat made this 1967-1968 season one that fans can compare to any other.

Having lost many of last year's top-flight players, South Side's football team was not expected to be one of the top contenders in the city race this year. Its hard work and determination proved this assumption wrong, though, as the coaches molded it into one of the most exciting teams in the area. Employing a potent offense and a stubborn defense, the team outscored its opponents by an average of 21.3 to 8.7 points per game.

Senior fullback Scott Lougheed proved to be the team leader on his way to the city scoring title as he scored 75 points on 10 touchdowns and 15 extra-point conversions. Scott also placed himself high on the list of South's outstanding booters by punting 29 times for an average of 36 yards and a total tally of 1032 yards.

Senior John Lumpp and Juniors Bill Watson and Bobby Lucas each scored five touchdowns for 30 points apiece. Sophomore Randy Rhoades scored two touchdowns, and Seniors Billy Lee and Larry Rutledge each scored once. Al Williams kicked two extra points; Larry Rutledge added one.

The Archers opened the season by defeating Bishop Luers, 18-6. They then fell to Snider, 19-7, but recovered to initiate a six-game winning streak.

The first victim of this drive was New Haven by a 19-0 count. Then, after edging North Side 7-6, the Archers knocked off the highly-rated Central Tigers. The next three games found South winning by the most impressive scores. These were a 33-6 victory over Elmhurst, a 54-7 triumph over Huntington, and a 27-0 battering of Madison Heights.

The Archer team lines up in the single wing offense which has brought the Green and White into the public's eye in the last three years. In the backfield, Lumpp (41), Lougheed (33), Lucas (11), and Ioannou (22) prepare to charge the holes opened by the offensive line.

Mat Bartkiewicz (58), Tim Wadlington (80), and Jim Stoops (36) converge on the advancing ball carrier to stop his drive for a big gain.

Hurt by the loss of seven starting players who were elevated to the varsity gridiron squad, South Side's reserve team closed out this year's season with a record of two wins and seven losses. Despite having a losing season, the team showed poise in many situations and promised help for the varsity squad next year.

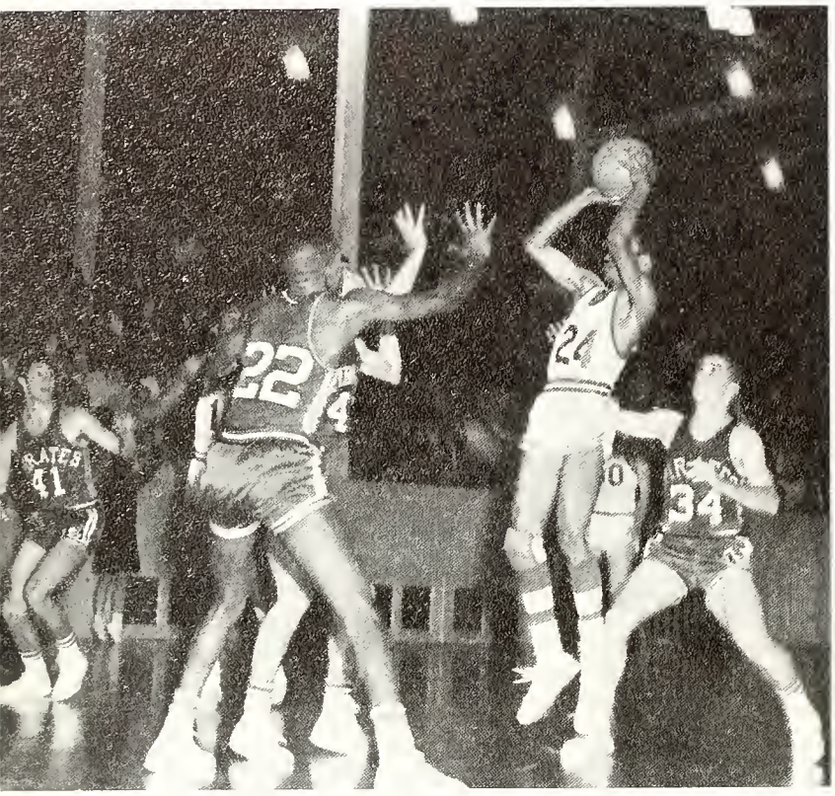
Having been defeated in their first two games by Bishop Luers and Central Catholic, the reserve Kellys gained their only two victories of the season by scores of 18-6 and 27-13 against New Haven and Concordia, respectively. In the 27-13 victory over Concordia, Randy Siples scored three of South's four touchdowns.

In the next five games, the Archers were on the short end of the score; but they showed great improvement every time they walked onto the field. In the final two games against Central and Elmhurst, the team played some of its best football. Against Central, the defense gave up only six points in three quarters but broke down in the fourth quarter when they gave up two quick touchdowns and finally lost a 27-7 contest.

During the nine games of the season, six Kellys scored all of the team's 97 points. Leading the Archers were Derrick Clancy and Randy Siples with six touchdowns each. Rod Green, Donn Nichols, and Eddie Stewart each scored one touchdown, while Richard Duff added seven extra points in nine attempts at the uprights.

This year the starting reserve offense included Donn Nichols, Derrick Clancy, Randy Siples, Tom Fruechtenicht, Bart Mellott, Bill Kunkle, Jim Stoop, Tim Edington, Russ Reed, Ronald Click, and Tim Wadlington.

Kelly basketball team plays under new coach,



Steve Bryant shoots for two from the top of the key against Anderson Madison Heights. Steve averaged about 15 points in every game.

After two almost unbelievable basketball seasons for the Archers, the Kelly fans had to come back to earth in this rebuilding year. With no superstars playing, the Green fought hard to gain a 7-15 record for the season. Although one of the smallest teams in South's history, it used quickness and determination to stay in many games which the experts felt would be easy victories for their opponents.

South Side's first loss came at the hands of Southport in a crushing 81-51 defeat; however, the team bounced back to beat Norwell, 54-46 in the next game. After losing the next three games, it had a come-from-behind victory over DeKalb, 54-50. The next weekend the Archers knocked off a stubborn New Haven team, 61-56.

South lost its next three games, two of them in the Holiday Tournament, before having its most outstanding weekend of the season. On this weekend it upset a tough Anderson Madison Heights squad, 57-54, and then upended Mishawaka Saturday night by a 56-53 tally.

Following this tremendous weekend, the Green met Elmhurst and played a fantastic game, staying with them until the closing minutes. Dropping two more in succession, South then beat Bishop Dwenger 53-51 in the last second on a 25-foot jump shot by Steve Bryant.

In the Sectional Tournament the Kelly team scored the most points of the season in a 67-45 thrashing of Hoagland in the first game, but then dropped a 78-62 decision to Concordia, ending a disappointing season, but one of experience for Mr. Holt and the underclassmen.

The 1967-68 hardwood squad, which compiled a season record of seven wins and 15 losses, is Front Row: coach Mr. Preston Brown, Rietdorf, Bryant, Lake, Cornacchione, Turner. Back Row: Dray, Loomis, Edwards, Melchi, Nelson, Starks, coach Mr. Charles Holt.

Reserve team compiles winning record of 11-9

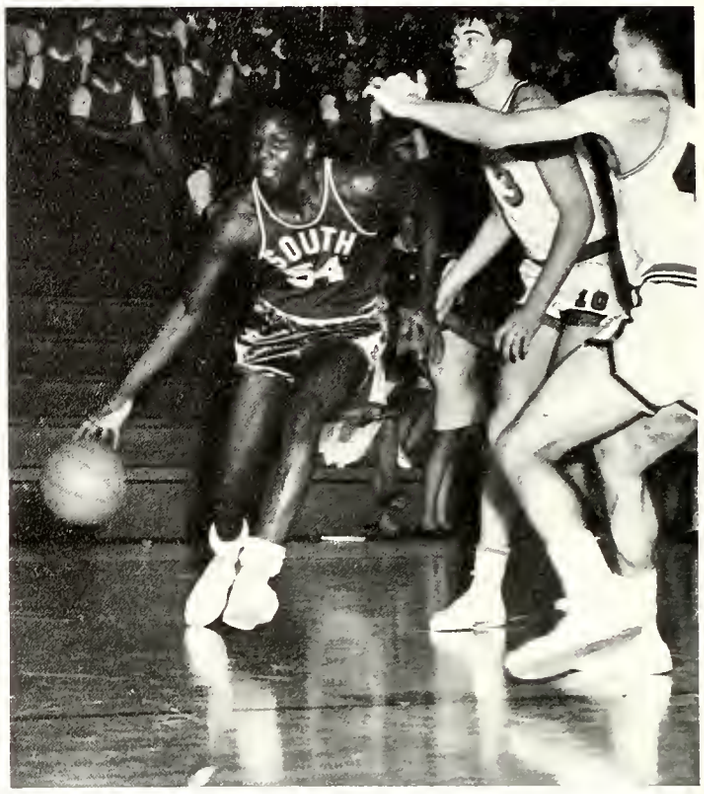
Building confidence, ability, and determination in inexperienced basketball players is the responsibility of the reserve basketball team. Under the direction of Mr. Gary Crawford, the team members provided the varsity with a lot of players as well as gaining a winning record of 11-9 for themselves. Their play proved to be very outstanding throughout the year, despite the change in personnel.

The team, playing its games before the varsity games, had the same opponents as the varsity throughout the season except for the difference in the Holiday tournaments. Reserves opened with two disappointing losses to Southport and Norwell, but bounced back to defeat Huntington. After dropping a decision to Anderson, they then won three straight from Central Catholic, DeKalb, and New Haven.

Drawing Concordia as their first round opponent in the Holiday tournament, they proceeded to knock them off by a 51-46 tally. They then won the tournament trophy in a 50-39 triumph over Central Catholic.

Their record standing at 6-3, they dropped three in a row to Bishop Luers, Madison Heights, and Mishawaka. Finding the winning combination once again, they triumphed over Elmhurst, Goshen, North Side, and Bishop Dwenger, bringing their record to 10-6.

Heading into February, they ran into bad luck, dropping games to Concordia, Snider, and Central. The team then pulled together to win the season final over Warsaw. The season proved to be a very successful one for Mr. Gary Crawford and the player in the initial season for both.



Charlie Dunbar, attempting to break up a tough Snider press, dribbles past two players on his way down court during a reserve game.

The 1967-68 reserve basketball team, which won 11 of its 20 games including the Holiday Tournament, are Front Row; Strubhar, Ehresman, Brown, Drewery. Second Row: Motter, Gunkler, Dunbar, Graf, coach Mr. Gary Crawford, Hoff, Lucas, Turner, Lockett.

Sophomore Dave Kaplan appears to be trying a new dance step while playing tennis. He hopes to help the varsity out this year.

South Side tennis team wins city series race

Winning seven straight city series matches without a loss, the Archer tennis team captured the 1967 city series crown. In outside competition they dropped two out of four, giving them an outstanding season record of 11-2.

The Netters, coached by Mr. Everett Havens, started the season with two decisive victories by 7-0 counts over both Huntington and Muncie Central. Dropping a tough one to Peru by 5-2, they then came back to crush Bishop Luers 7-0. The next match was their last, but most devastating loss as they dropped a 7-0 decision to Muncie Burris. The next eight matches proved to be successful for the Kelly netters as they one by one knocked off North Side, 7-0; Central, 7-0; Snider, 6-1; Central Catholic, 7-0; Howe Military, 5-2; Concordia, 4-3; Bluffton, 6-1; and Elmhurst, 5-2.

During the season, South held a doubles tournament in which eight schools participated. Warsaw won the tournament as South's only victory came in the first round of the number two bracket. Chad Stettler and Joel Salon, who were in the first bracket, lost their first match.

In the fall of the 1967-68 school years, the first state tennis tournament was held. South entered Kerry and Dave Kaplan in the sectional singles competition. Kerry won four straight matches to win the singles title. Dave won his first two rounds, dropping a match in the semifinals to the opponent his brother beat in the finals. Due to the lack of players because of other sports, South did not enter any doubles teams in the Sectionals.

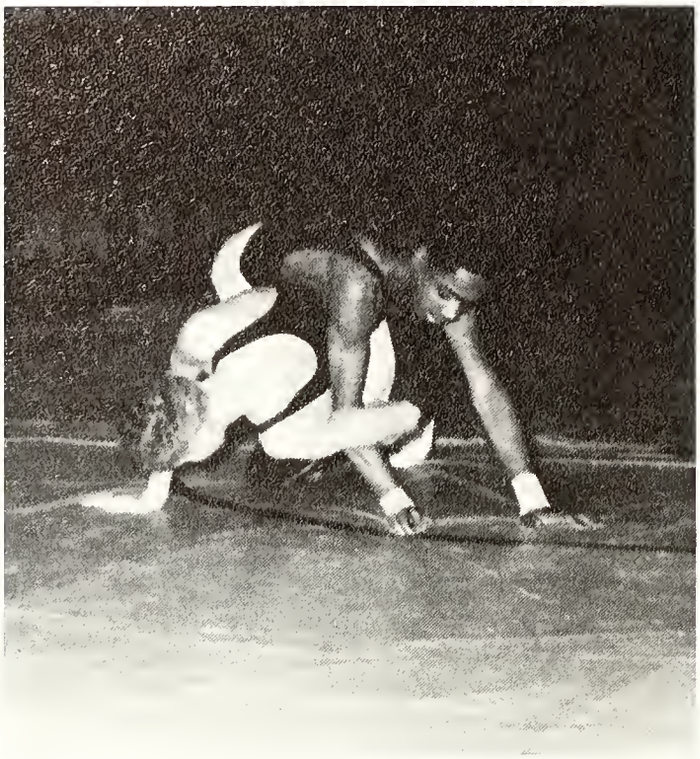
Archer matmen compile finest record to date,



Tom Stewart, who wrestles in the 95-pound weight class, gains valuable riding points during a wrestling meet in South Side's gym.

Recording its third straight winning season in as many years of existence, South Side's wrestling team under the direction of Mr. Hyde carded an impressive record of 8 wins and 3 loses for the 1967-68 season.

The varsity wrestling team, composed of members in twelve weight divisions from lightweight (95 pounds and under) to heavyweight (180 pounds and over), posted the best record in the team's short history. The varsity grapplers in order of their weights were Tom Stewart, Larry Taylor, Greg Slyford, Tom Karol, Tony Moran, John Winter, Terry Lawrence, Ken Harding, Bill Watson, Mike Roberts, Bob Laster, and Dick Kelly. Bill Kindel wrestled well in the 133-pound class before being side-lined with an injury early in the season, and Sophomore Steve Puff wrestled frequently in the 95-pound class.

Led by undefeated Junior Bill Watson, South placed Tom Stewart, Ken Harding, Bill Watson, and Mike Roberts in the Regionals and captured second place honors in the Sectional tournament held at New Haven. Although things did not go as well for the Kelly matmen in the Regionals as they did in the Sectionals, the team finished fairly well. Ken Harding and Bill Watson placed fourth in their respective weight classes while Tom Stewart and Mike Roberts captured third.

The team's only losses came at the hands of Fort Wayne Central, Bellmont, and Concordia; however, each of these was very close in overall point totals.

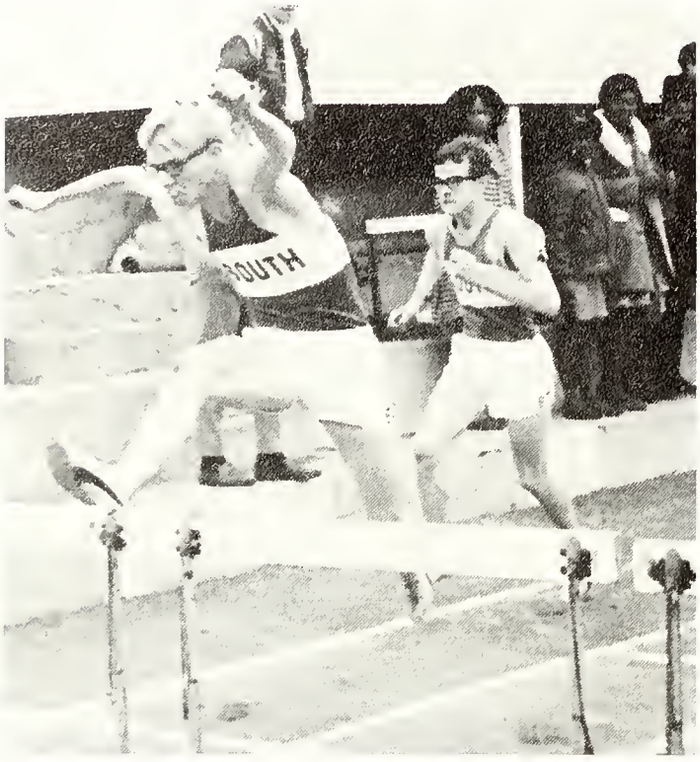
Archer trackmen capture eighth in state meet



Seniors Neil Weikart and Steve Sell race madly to the finish line during a high hurdles race in an attempt to capture the blue ribbon.

South Side tied for eighth place in the 1967 State Track and Field Meet behind the efforts of second-place finishers John Lumpp and Tom Fleming to complete a successful season. The Archers ended the season with a 9-4 record, placing second in the regional meet and fourth in the sectionals.

John Lumpp earned second-place honors in the 440-yard dash in the State Finals by running the one-lap race in under 49 seconds, while Tom Fleming put the shot over 60 feet for the runnerup spot in the shotput. Shotputter Greg Gaulden and the mile relay team of Bill Watson, Gary Stoops, Ron Lowery, and John Lumpp also advanced to the state meet but failed to earn a place.

The Kellys also had two record breakers. Bill Barker set a new South Side pole vault mark at 14 feet, 5½ inches. Tom Fleming put the shot 59 feet, 2½ inches to set a new North Side Relays record.

South Side won the first four meets of the 1967 season before bowing to a strong Kokomo team. After finishing fifth in the North Side Relays, the tracksters split in a triangular contest with Snider and Concordia. The Kellys downed Central twice, New Haven, and Central Catholic while losing to Elmhurst and Culver Military Academy at the end of the regular campaign.

The season proved to be one of the best ones for the Archer track team in the past few years. The middle distance runs seemed to be the strong point in the track events, while it was the shotput in the fields events.

John Lumpp, who won second place in the 440-yard run in the State Track and Field Meet in Indianapolis last spring, tries to beat a Central runner at the tape in the 100-yard dash. Rich Cochran appears to be holding down the third position right behind John.

Tom Motter, warming up for the long golf season ahead, lets his fellow teammates know that he thinks he has hit a fairly long shot.

1967 Kelly golfers place two on All-City team

Hank George, Merrill Phillips, and Ken Cornacchione just can't seem to decide whether Merrill's putt will break to the left or right.

South Side's golf squad was in the thick of the city competition this season with Ken Cornacchione, Dick Kelley, and Ed Hughes, all members of last year's team, returning to action. The team also gained added strength from a group of players who were ineligible last year because they had accepted merchandise. They all became eligible to play on April 14, 1968.

In 1967 the Kelly linksmen had a fairly successful season, winning the majority of their matches. They had double wins over North Side, Garrett, and Snider high schools. The team which provided them with the most trouble was Central Catholic. They lost two matches during the season to this outstanding squad.

In the Sectional Tournament, the Archers finished in fifth place, being led by Jim Lohman. The other members of the squad in the order of their positions were Ken Cornacchione, Ed Hughes, Dick Kelley, and Chuck Nelson. Ken Cornacchione and Jim Lohman were both selected for the All-City Golf Team in 1967.

The team, under the direction of Mr. Robert Drummond, hosted its home matches at the Brookwood course and held most of its practice sessions there, too. The team was selected in golf matches that were held just before the season opened in the middle of April.

Underclassmen dominate South harrier squad

The 1967 varsity cross country squad, made up mostly of underclassmen, finished its season with a record of six wins and nine losses. The Archer harriers then placed ninth in the annual Shoaff Park Sectional but did not qualify anyone to compete in the regional.

The Kellys, under the direction of Mr. Preston Brown, won their first meet of the season against South Adams, 16-45. In the meet, Don Sawvel won individual honors with a 10:43 time. He was followed in order by Norm Neuenschwander, Perry Ehresman, and Jeff Olsen. South gained a second-place finish in the next meet by defeating Hoagland and losing to Bellmont.

The next two meets proved to be successful as the Archers downed Bishop Luers and West Noble. In the fifth meet, though, they met defeat at the hands of Kokomo by a 23-36 count. Late in September, South hosted a meet in which they beat Central's Tigers but fell to both Elmhurst's Trojans and the Bulldogs of New Haven.

South then bowed to North Side and Concordia in a triangular meet. In the last contest of the regular season, the Kellys beat Central Catholic and bowed to Bishop Luers whom they had beaten earlier.

The Sectional performance was disappointing to Archer fans; however, Norm Neuenschwander placed twenty-sixth followed by Perry Ehresman, Jeff Olsen, Pete Adams, and Jeff Green. Don Sawvel, the team's top harrier during the regular season, suffered an injury and was unable to compete in the Sectional. Since the team consisted of almost all underclassmen, the Archers can look forward to a very productive season next year.

Before I say anything good, I just want to remind you about the money you owe me for my pants, for lunch + interest, and also I want my pin. Well yes I have it arranged that we'll be sitting together! I bet you can hardly wait. This summer I doubt if I'll see you, but if you feel that you want a reputation spread about you, just call me and I'll see what I can do. I don't know about you, but I've had a lot of fun just messing around with you this year, and next year we'll have even more fun. We'll have all three dates at assemblies to look forward too.

Safety Council sponsors informative assembly

Alan Hofer, Carol Kettler, Mark Piepenbrink, and Cari Small emphasize the necessity of recognizing a traffic sign familiar to all.

Seeking to inform South Siders of the necessary safety habits to be observed, the Safety Council carried on a successful campaign during the school year. The members were either elected by members of their homerooms or selected by their homeroom teachers. Through viewing films concerning safe health and good driving and listening to qualified speakers, the members recognized specific health and safety hazards. They initiated several programs to spread these ideas to the Archer student body. Coordinating these activities was Mr. Thomas Burrell.

A special feature sponsored by the Safety Council this year was the Chrysler Corporation safety assembly. Combining popular music with good driving tips produced an enjoyable and informative program for the students. A driver's test was given to all licensed drivers in their homerooms to help detect their driving weaknesses.

With serious intentions, members of the Safety Council strove to decrease the number of Archer jaywalkers. Warnings painted on the sidewalks and actual photographs from accidents discouraged Kellys from dangerous habits.

Sparked by the theme of old-time vaudeville, Philo presented many entertaining programs. Studying the history of vaudeville and the lives of famous vaudevillians enabled the members to produce an old-fashioned Spring Follies. Helping to achieve these efforts was the club's sponsor, Mr. Evlyn Spray.

Beginning the year with Sophomore Orientation, the members proceeded to make plans for the Thanksgiving play. In December, "Belles and Beaux" was the theme of the successful after-game dance.

Activities included in the club's curriculum were the Mother-Daughter recognition tea, the Spring Banquet with a St. Patrick's Day theme, and a spring picnic.

Officers who carried out the activities of Philo were president, Cindy Gidley; vice-president, Cindy Shireman; secretary, Bonnie Hagerman; and treasurer, Lynn Ress. The members of Philo attained points by attending meetings, serving on committees, and placing in various short story, poetry, and creative writing contests. Members received awards on Recognition Day.

After an informal introduction to South Side, sophomores and Philo members become acquainted through snacks and lively conversations.

qualities by personal achievement in meets

Promoting interest in speech and developing good public speaking provided the initiative for the Wranglers Club. The major activity of the club during the year was participation in local speech meets. Members were given the opportunity to enter regional and state-wide contests in various divisions. Speakers won individual honors, while they also contributed to the success of their team.

All these efforts culminated at the end of the year in a state tournament very much like the basketball competition. Participants progressed through sectionals, regionals, and state eliminations. Those remaining proceeded to national finals for the last stage of competition.

In February, members of Wranglers produced and enacted the one act play, The Ceremony. Senior Julie Levy directed the play, and Steve Holt managed the lighting. The play was given to all interested Archers in the Greeley Room.

Wranglers members belonged to a national speech organization, the National Forensic League. They were awarded NFL certificates and given recognition for their participation in speech by their sponsor, Mrs. Mary Jane Crum.

During a special meeting, members of Wranglers Club and other Kellys view the play by Harvey Jefferies, The Ceremony.

In the play, The Ceremony, Warren Cole, Margo Bleeke, Wes Anderson, Mary Beth Rhoads, and Polly Rea display their theatrical abilities for their fellow Wranglers members and other interested Kellys. The audience wrote criticisms of the play for the benefit of the cast.

meetings include literary contest, drama study

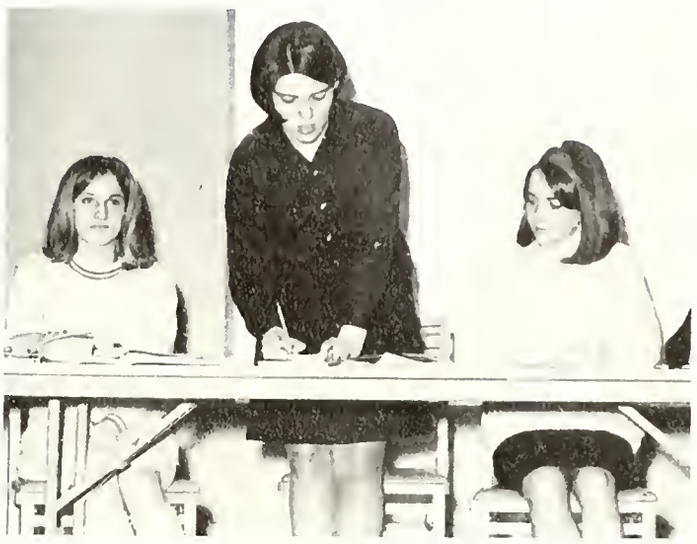
Filled with service projects, stimulating programs, and traditional activities, Meterite Club was directed by Mrs. Marjorye Baylor, Mrs. Janet Spindler, and Mrs. Louise Jones.

The program for the first meeting of the year was an entertaining skit which starred Meterite officers, president, Charlene Post; vice president, Sue Pendergast; secretary, Terry Phelps; and treasurer, Diane Farhi.

A program theme of drama was chosen for the first semester; and Mr. John Pearson, Miss Mary Graham, Sue Hoover, Mary Beth Rhoads, and Margo Bleeke were among the guests invited to speak at the club meetings.

Activities including the spelling bee, short story contest, and the Meterite-sponsored after-game dance aided in keeping the club members busy. During the Christmas season, part of the club prepared appropriate skits and visited the Lutheran Hospital. While at the hospital, the members distributed small gifts to some of the patients.

Second semester sophomore officers were president, Mary Beth Rhoads; vice president, Candy Shireman; secretary, Cindy Hess; and treasurer, Nancy Schmidt.



Sophomore president Mary Beth Rhoads looks for the records for the meeting while her fellow officers watch her frantic search.

The Mother-Daughter Tea in January recognized juniors who had accomplished outstanding records in their dedication to Meterite. At this time, the junior officers acknowledged the new sophomore officers; and the juniors joined the big sister club of Meterite, Philo.

Political Science encourages open discussion

The Political Science Club, sponsored by Mr. Ralph Bogardue and Mr. William Hedges, brought the members of the club into contact with many different types of ideas and opinions. The members were exposed to a variety of viewpoints and came into contact with all types of people. The club provided an interesting way for students to learn about current events and develop an aptitude for individual thinking and a tolerance for people with different opinions.

Speakers were used extensively to present ideas to the club. Such topics as welfare programs, crime and civil liberties, city and state government, Vietnam, and the housing problem in Fort Wayne were discussed. Speakers usually allowed time for questions after the main discussion so that students could ask for additional information.

Officers for this year were president, Steve Kimbrough; vice president, Annie Bolman; secretary, Ann Spear; and treasurer, Tom Lampe. These students were responsible for planning programs and guided their members in discovering current conditions and situations. Through speakers, each member was able to explore new thoughts.

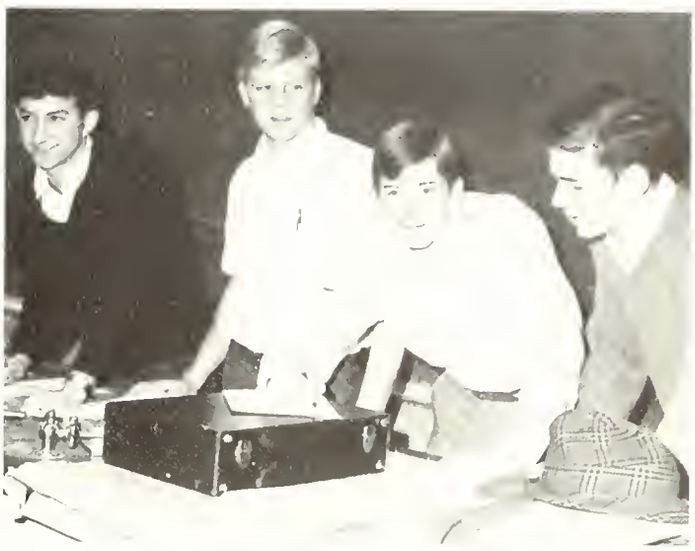
goals; Lettermen plant shrubs, head can drive

Intending to serve South Side and the local community, the Lettermen's Club carried out worthwhile projects with the guidance of its sponsor, Mr. George Davis. Meeting the second Thursday of each month, the Lettermen reported their progress and planned future events.

Presiding officers were president, Kerry Kaplan; vice president, Don Beardsley; secretary-treasurer, Scott Longheed; and sergeant-at-arms, Mark Smith.

Assisting the Dads' Club at the beginning of the year, Lettermen escorted the candidates for Homecoming Queen; and they sold tickets to the Homecoming dance. An informal potluck in the fall preceded the annual Christmas Food Drive. Urging all homerooms to reach a specified goal, the Lettermen's Club established another successful year for the Food Drive at South Side.

In January, the Lettermen planned the King Kelly dance with the cheerleaders. The club's activities were concluded on March 29 with the Lettermen's Banquet. On this occasion, members of the faculty took Lettermen guests.



Senior officers Kerry Kaplan, Don Beardsley, Scott Lougheed, and Mark Smith discuss the approaching banquet at an evening meeting.

Subscriptions, photos, editorials, layouts result

Striving to provide a paper which was of interest to each student, faculty member, and subscriber, editors began work on the Times early every morning. With the pressure of deadlines and much pride in their work, the staff members were skilled in writing stories, headlines, and cutlines. At the sound of the 3:20 bell, the number of students in the Times room doubled as agents, bookheads, writers, and editors hurried to their assignments.

With the change of the major staff four times a year, the workers were able to gain experience in many fields of the newspaper. Serving as competent General Managers were seniors Margey Eberly, Tom Theye, Gloria McVay, and Sandy Lipp. Working with them to publish a top-grade paper was a staff of nearly 300 people. Papers were issued every Thursday morning.

Sponsored by Miss Anne White, the paper was carefully supervised. Helping all the workers on the Times was Miss White's primary job. She directed and advised the staff concerning the activities of the paper while continuing her English and journalism teaching duties.

General Manager Sandy Lipp discusses possible feature stories with Junior Barb Martin. Sandy directed the last term of the newspaper.

Associate Editor Annie Bolman and Editor Kerry Kaplan discuss corrections to copy and layouts in preparation for a winter deadline.

typical memories of school days to trace year

Clutched under books, piled on cafeteria tables, misplaced in the gym, and scribbled throughout, the Totem rewards its staff by becoming a constant companion of students from its distribution until the final day of school. For Editor Kerry Kaplan and Associate Editor Annie Bolman, the publication of the book was the end of planning layouts, reading copy, and cropping pictures.

Five deadlines demanded that all of the editors combine to submit the book in 48-page divisions. The section editors, junior editors, and adviser united to send the Opening, Faculty, Underclass, Academics, Organizations, and Senior sections to the publisher in their entirety by March first. Sports pages were sent by seasonal schedules.

Aside from the need for imaginative layouts and copy and careful copyreading and editing, the staff realized the necessity for good photography. Head Photographer Stan Fishman and assistant Doug Perry attended school functions and sports contests to record moments of victory, defeat, happiness, and dejection as indicative of an Archer's experiences at South Side.

Future Nurses, Bridge Club face challenges;

Joining a fine group of clubs at South Side was the Future Nurses Association. Sponsored by Mrs. Jo Ann Orr, its aim was to provide an opportunity for exploration of the medical field for all interested students. Membership was not limited to those desiring a career in nursing, but it was open to anyone intrigued by the medical profession.

Several methods were used to acquaint the members with opportunities in the medical profession. Some meetings featured speakers from various schools of nursing. The members toured the St. Joseph School of Nursing, the Veterans Administration Hospital, and International Harvester. Numerous skits by the club members enlivened meetings and dramatized nursing situations.

Whether north, south, east, or west, the members of the Bridge Club enjoy their unique game. Sponsored by Mrs. Margaret Hilmert and Miss Lutie Young, this club permitted the expert and the novice to contest his skills. Since bridge is an accepted social accomplishment, the club gave its members a knowledge which is useful and enjoyable in high school and future years.

Cinema, Rifle assemble for benefit of Archers

One of South Side's oldest organizations, the Rifle Club was sponsored by Mr. Alan Poorman during its thirty-third year. The club was divided into sections, the Boys' Rifle Club and the Girls' Rifle Club. Mr. Poorman was assisted by Mr. John Stetler, a member of the Fort Wayne Police Department. Mr. Stetler gave each club twelve hours of instruction last fall, and he continued to help the members throughout the year. The clubs met once a week for practice and instruction in accuracy and safety. Each member bought his own ammunition, but South Side furnished the clubs with rifles.

Projecting some of the finest motion pictures to come from Hollywood in recent years was the Cinema Guild's main aim. This year, under the sponsorship of Mrs. Mildred Luse, films shown were Lost Horizon, The Guns of Navarone, Arsenic and Old Lace, and Fail safe. The club presented All the King's Men, a free movie open to all Archers, to encourage new membership. To raise money for expenses, the Cinema Guild sponsored a basketball game between the faculty men and the Dads' Club.

Mr. John Stetler watches as Sophomore Darrell Schlatter and Junior Clark Druesedow shoot to hit their targets with improving accuracy.

Sharpshooters Vicki Smith and Judy Hart kneel to improve their aim while Karen Stettler and Shirley Jackson shoot for higher targets.

Hi-Y works to publish school directory, plans

"To create, maintain, and extend throughout the home, school, and community high standards of Christian character"—this statement is the admirable purpose of a club whose generous handling of odds and ends has won it a wholesome reputation at South Side.

Open to junior and senior boys who passed clever induction red tape, Hi-Y took charge of bus trips for away games, provided an orientation assembly for sophomore boys, and kept up the popular Hi-Y Top Scholars Board for academic recognition of outstanding Archers.

Leading the Hi-Y'ers were five student officers and a chaplain, all receiving counsel from Mr. Robert Weber. They were president, Chuck Fay; vice president, Alan Hofer; secretary, Bill Briegel; treasurer, Eric Ornas; sergeant-at-arms, Paul Nelson; and chaplain, Mike Howard. These members were second-semester officers.

The activities of Hi-Y encompassed the Queen of Hearts dance, the clothes drive, the "Best Girl" Banquet honoring a woman faculty member, and the Hi-Y Directory, a serviceable compilation of addresses and telephone numbers.

Mr. Robert Weber, sponsor of the Hi-Y Club, fondly watches the fans who are leaving the restaurant to board the home-bound buses.

Band leads student body in pep rally's songs;

Leading the band at all of the Archer pep sessions was Mr. Robert Drummond. Selecting, composing, and arranging songs were also Mr. Drummond's responsibilities.

One of the band's greatest tasks was to play at the fifteen home athletic events of the Archers. The band joined with the choir to perform musical programs for the Thanksgiving, Christmas, and Easter Assemblies. In April, the Symphonic Band played at Harrison Hill Junior High School for an all-school assembly.

Individual merit was also displayed among the musicans. Many members entered the State Music Contests which were conducted at Butler University.

The orchestra, also directed by Mr. Robert Drummond, appeared at the music assemblies, the Senior Play, the Quarter-Century Banquet, and the Spring Concert.

As in the band, many members of the orchestra were honored in being chosen to participate in the Fort Wayne Community Schools' All-City Orchestra. This special orchestra gave performances from November until March, including several spring concerts at junior high schools.

Mr. Robert Drummond, head of the instrumental section of the Music Department, directs the string section of the South Side orchestra.

Concert Choir receives opportunities to sing;

Junior Bob Swain plays Liebestraum by Franz Liszt on the piano for the February music assembly, attended by all South Siders.

Echoing through the halls of South Side were the voices of the Concert Choir. Leading them was Mr. Lester Hostetler, known as "Hos" by the Concert Choir members.

Meeting every day during fifth period, the choir strove to master a variety of songs. With a fine reputation from past years, the Concert Choir was requested to sing at several community affairs. The Rotary Club, the Chamber of Commerce, and the Lincoln National Bank were places at which the choir gave performances.

Thanksgiving, Christmas, and Spring assemblies featured the Concert Choir as a portion of the programs. On February 14, St. Valentine's Day, the Concert Choir and the instrumental section of the Music Department gave an assembly. Mr. Hostetler appropriately inspired most of the choir's numbers with the element of love.

An important part of the Concert Choir's organization was the assistance of the students. Head secretary, Connie Heckley, checked attendance; and foreman, Steve Todd, handled the necessary equipment. Carol Young accompanied all of the choir's songs with her assistant, Bob Swain.

The Concert Choir gave local performances. Front Row: Burton, Houtz, Hallay, Bolman, Alvis, Frederick. Second Row: Gates, Wilson, North, Zollinger, James, Papai. Third Row: Clarke, Jackson, Arnett, Holloway, Billman, Stuerzenberger, McLaughlin. Fourth Row: Smart, Kessmier, DeVore, Meeks, E. Bonnie Houtz revealed talented qualities in vocal and instrumental music, and Becky Buskirk exhibited her abilities through the choir.

Directing the Concert Choir members with the enthusiasm of a fine instructor, Mr. Lester Hostetler finishes another favorite melody.

Cheerleaders enjoy sparking spirit for team;

Senior varsity cheerleader Sheryl Nelson encourages Archer fans to yell by shouting a chant enthusiastically to the supporting crowd.

Senior Tricia Hunt throws herself into a responsive cheer to urge louder backing for the starting five at a coliseum doubleheader.

The varsity cheerleading squad consists of, bottom to top; Ann Spear, Bev Gouloff, Karen Kessler, Sheryl Nelson, and Tricia Hunt.

Reserve squad: Grendel Burrell, Vicki Spears, Cathy Frederick, and Jean Dunlap. On the ladder are Lydia Hallay and Jennifer Senseny.

Cheerblock, Color Guard produce enthusiasm

After practicing over the summer vacation and attending conferences, the cheerleaders returned to school to boost team support at pep sessions and at sporting events. Tricia Hunt captained the varsity squad, and Senior Lydia Hallay was in charge of the reserves. Together, the two squads coordinated formations and taught words and rhythms to the Cheerblock and student body.

At the close of the first semester, the cheerleaders joined the Lettermen's Club in sponsoring the annual King Kelly Dance. Senior Sheryl Nelson was the honored cheerleader who crowned Scott Lougheed King Kelly.

Adding an air of splendor to home athletic events were the ten members of the South Side Color Guard. Under the supervision of Mr. Robert Drummond and Captain Karalee Krause, these girls presented the flags at home games before the singing of the National Anthem.

Striving to display pride and school spirit for South Side were those girls who were members of the Cheerblock. Membership of the 1968 cheerblock increased to 120 members and provided much support for the Kelly teams.

For the third consecutive year, Senior Julie Inskeep was elected captain of the Cheerblock. Helping her were representatives, Sophomore Nancy Nelson, Junior Janet Gerke, and Senior Carol Kettler. This year the members voted to discontinue regular practice, but regular attendance at games was enforced by the decision of co-sponsors Mrs. Dorothy Arnold and Mrs. Phyllis Bear. Archer buttons were sold by the members to support the teams.

Senior service worker John Winter seems to be prepared to do anything in the name of service, but where could he possibly be going?

Specializing as lab assistants, bulletin board designers, and errand runners, students served the school by working for individual teachers. Before and after school, and during every period of the day, Archers were seen servicing. Taking attendance in study hall, relating messages from the general office, and helping students in the chemistry lab were a few of the many tasks of the dedicated service workers at South Side.

Any student was able to service for a teacher if he had a free period and had the teacher's permission. Points were earned daily, which resulted in awards.

The Service Club had no official meetings during the school year. The only time when all of the students were together was at the annual Service Club Potluck. At this time the service workers enjoyed each other's fellowship and heard several speakers.

The potluck included the presentation of the Randolph Jacobs Trophy for outstanding service; Senior Bonnie Hagerman was the recipient of the award by student vote, as announced by the sponsor, Mr. Ralph Boling.

Keeping all of the films and equipment in order was a big job for the Projectionists Club. The 12 projectionists, under the direction of Mr. Ned Yingst, ran most of the audio-visual equipment at South Side. They delivered and picked up machinery, set up films, and ran projectors at the request of the teachers.

Serving the hungry Archers at all of the home basketball games were the members of the Booster Club. Sponsored by Mr. LaVerne Harader, the members sold candy and coke during the half-time intermission. The profits were used for the reserve and varsity cheerleaders' expenses. Pompoms, uniforms, bus trips, and award letters were provided for the cheerleaders through the work of the Booster Club's five members.

Necessary at each home basketball game were members of the Ushers Club. An organizaton of nine members, the ushers were posted around the gymnasium in order to help spectators find seats. They also checked people sitting in the reserved seats section. Mr. Daniel Boylan organized the group and set up their positions.

Seniors Tyla Hinshaw and Sharon Cornog look over the balance of the Booster Club's treasury, which is used to support the cheerleaders.

activities in writing, production of presentation

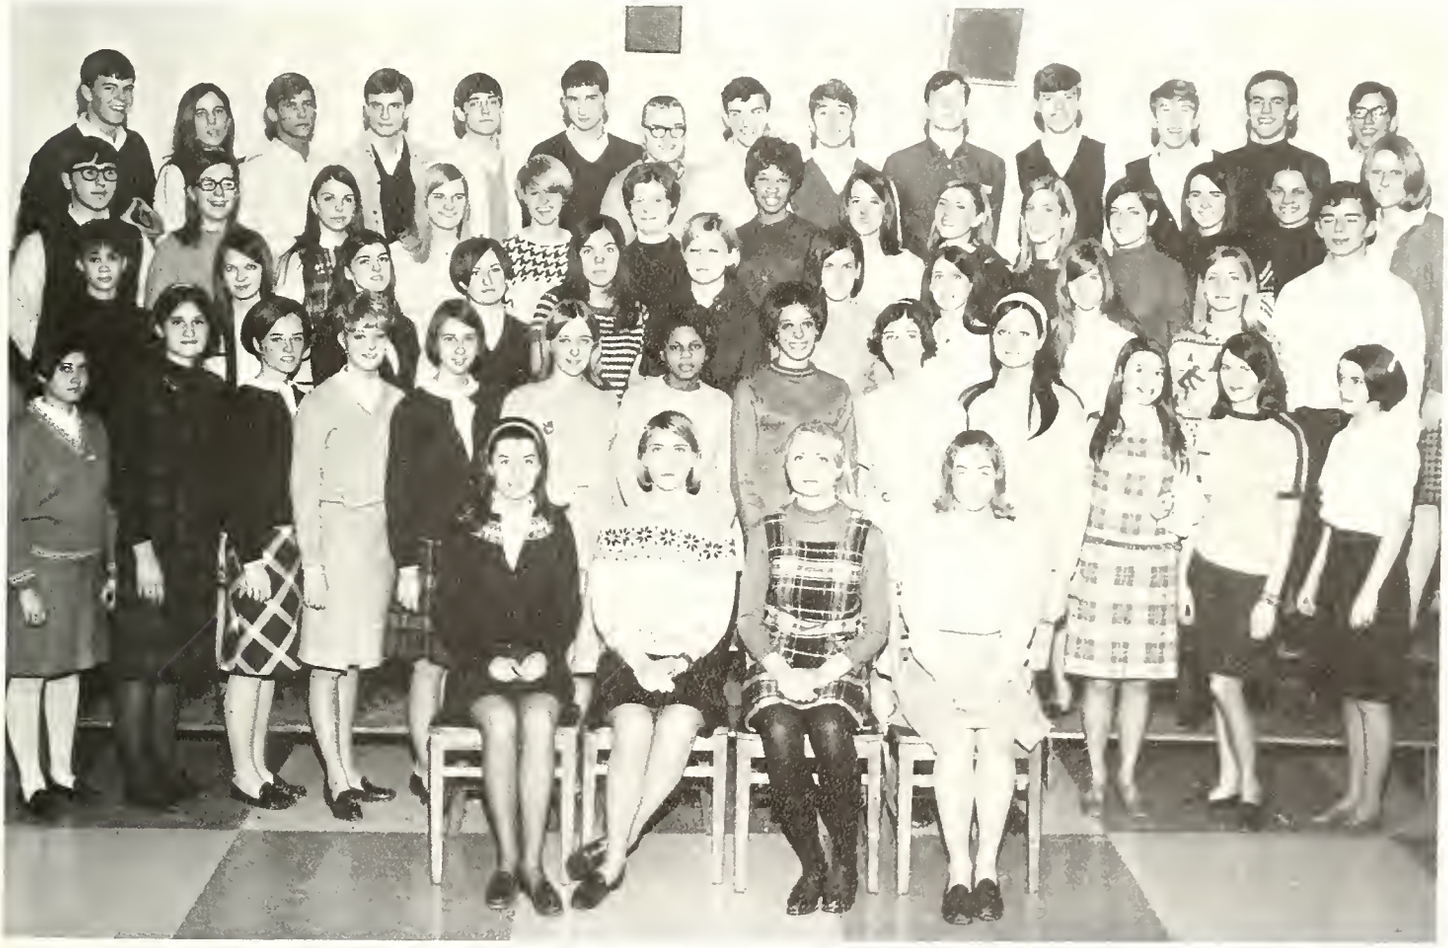
Assemblies Workshop, the largest club at South Side, rendered a service to the school by presenting assemblies for important occasions. Under the leadership of the officers, president, Sally Aldridge; secretary, Jeannie DeVore; and treasurer, Cari Small, the club presented three programs to the student body.

The club's activities included a Thanksgiving assembly showing how Americans celebrate this holiday, a presentation of Christmas around the world, and an Easter program.

With the direction of Mr. David Cowdrey and Mr. Don Locke, students participated in all aspects of the presentation. Try-outs enabled members to audition for parts, both speaking and walk-on. Others helped with costuming, props, staging, and narration.

In the spring, students receive rewards for outstanding contributions to the club. The highest honor, the Lucy Osborne Award, is given to an outstanding senior. Through hard work in this organization, the members received valuable experience in stagecraft and acting and presented assemblies for the Archers.

Participants in the Thanksgiving Assembly portray the familiar theme that people must realize the things for which they can be thankful.



The large number of members in Assemblies Workshop allows the students various areas for work. Front Row: DeVore, Aldridge, Spillson, Small. Second Row: Frankenstein, Hoard, Adams, Summers, Campbell, Shireman, Terry, Richard, Bartels, Azar, DeWald, Zimmerman, Weilemann. Third Row: Wilson, Dunlap, Nidlinger, Kyrou, Worman, Syndrom, Hollister, Falk, Bieberich, Wise, Smith. Fourth Row: Briegel, J. Red Cross, Vesta create constructive ideals;

During the first semester, Red Cross Club engaged in several creative projects and activities. The members entertained children at the Simpson Day Center; games were played, and the club presented the children with candy favors. Organizing this project were first-semester president, Sue Kellermier; vice president, Terri Lambert; secretary, Marjory Dickmeyer; treasurer, Debbie Bulleman, and the club sponsor, Mr. John Arnold.

Officers elected for the second semester were president Nancy Roehm; vice president, Pam Meyers; secretary, Chris Ream; and treasurer, Debbie Bullerman. Mrs. Hampton, from the Johnny Appleseed School, spoke about the school's outbound student program.

Sponsored by Mrs. Lavaun Muth, Vesta Club's purpose was to teach girls to be good homemakers and well-poised and gracious hostesses. Meetings included guest speakers and demonstrations given by the members. During the Christmas season, Vesta Club made candy treats for the children at State School. The purpose of this and other projects was to develop a better interest in the community.

Jr. Academy discovers challenges of science

The properties, varied uses, and potential importance of the laser are discussed for the chemistry and physics groups by Dr. Williams.

The main purpose of the Junior Academy of Science was to further scientific knowledge. The club sponsors were Mr. Richard Bussard and Mr. John Hicks. Officers who planned the meetings were president, Kaye Fichman; vice president, Phil Ruhl; and treasurer, Jack Kussmaul.

The two sections of the club were chemistry and physics. The entire club met only once a month to report the progress of each section which planned its own meetings. At each meeting, a program was planned which would interest the members of both the physics and chemistry sections. At these meetings, officers, section leaders, and sponsors also decided which speakers to invite to the club.

At the beginning of the year, the club had a picnic in the lab. Glass flasks were used as pots to cook hot dogs, and bunsen burners were sources of heat. The club saw a movie on cosmic rays and their use, and Junior Academy officers gave a demonstration on chemical magic. Dr. Williams, a professor at Indiana Institute of Technology, spoke about the known and unknown uses of laser that require much study and costly research.

G.A.A. furnishes relaxing, enjoyable program;

Judy Rice, Judy Carpino, and Jean Dunlap, three G.A.A. officers, look over some of the club's forthcoming athletic agenda items.

The girls of the Girls' Athletic Association spent many hours earning points toward the G.A.A. point plaque which is annually awarded to the senior girl with the most points. The main purpose of this organization, sponsored by Mrs. Jeanette Rohleder, is to provide entertainment and relaxation for its members. The girls spent their time competing in various tournaments of basketball, volleyball, and speedball. They divided up into teams and received points.

The point system was also based upon attendance, tennis, table tennis, and badminton. There was the possibility of earning extra points for such outside sports as skating, bowling, and swimming. Each girl who earned at least 300 points received a numeral at the end of the year; letters were given to those whose total number of points exceeded 1000. When a G.A.A. member reached the 1500 point mark, she received a pin. This was not the only reason the girls competed—they enjoyed themselves throughout the school year. One of their biggest and most important events was the annual Spring Show. Also included in this was the entire Girls' Physical Education Department. The sophomore dance classes presented a program which was followed by a gym exhibition. Another event held each year is the G.A.A. Recognition Banquet. The G.A.A. point plaque was awarded to the Senior who gained most points during membership.

The serve, as demonstrated here, is one of the most important skills that must be mastered by a player in order to excel in volleyball.

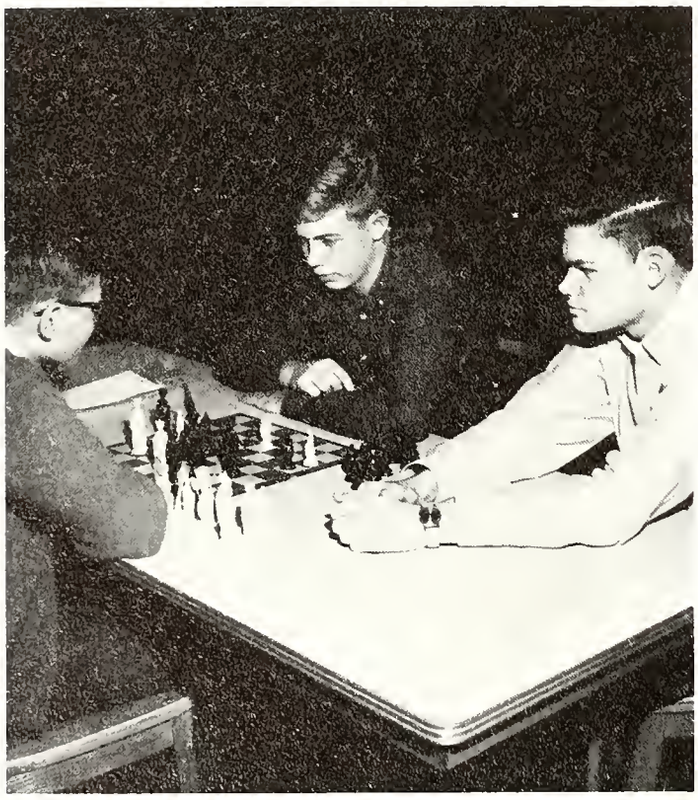
Girls play basketball too! Referee Nancy Highley tosses the ball up, starting another G.A.A. basketball game. This sport has become just as popular with the girls as the boys at South Side; however, an observer can see a definite difference in their style.

Intramural program establishes opportunities;

Referee Bill McNaughton has just tossed the ball up, and two members of opposing intramural basketball teams fight for it during a semi-final game in the night league. This sport has become one of the most well-liked activities in the Kelly intramural program.



Two Archers try to outmaneuver each other in a chess tournament. Mental exercise also plays a big part in the intramural program.

Intramural basketball scoring falls to managers Les Wilson, Bill Wallace, and Bob Corkwell for a fifth period competition.

creates challenge for numerous Kelly students

Whether scoring a basket, pulling off a triple reverse, or spiking a volleyball, South Side boys entered the 39-year-old intramural program for the opportunity to participate in scheduled athletic activitites. Directed by Mr. Clair Motz, the program has grown to include diverse activities, and has been ealled one of the finest programs in the nation.

The program is divided into three weight elasses—light, middle, and heavy—allowing everyone to participate with persons of his own size. The competition has also been split into the night and noon leagues.

In the fall the two major sports were eross country and flag football. The eross country squad held their annual meet with the reserve squad, and the flag football schedule was completed during the fifth period. Also there were weekend tournaments in tennis and chess.

Bowling, which began in the fall season, continued into the winter session. At this time handball, basketball, volleyball, and giant volleyball preceded a free-throw tourney.

The spring sports included tournaments in tennis, golf, pingpong, and badminton. There was also a traek and field meet held as the final activity.

After a hard day in school, two sophomores battle it out in a vigorous singles game of handball deep down in the "hidden" court.

Ed Hughes tightly guards an opponent during one of the numerous Kelly intramural games which take place on Thursday and Friday.

Mr. Clair Motz, who has directed South Side's intramural program to a position of excellence, observes the action in a noon game.

Latin students organize new chapter of JCL;

Exploring the adventure and history of the Latin language is one of the primary purposes of the Junior Classical League. Relating ancient Rome to third and fourth-year Latin classes enables each member to appreciate his Cicero and Vergil. Sponsored by Miss Lois Holtmeyer and Miss Mary Edith Reiff, JCL is a new organization at South Side. It is an offical chapter of the National Junior Classical League for all high school students.

JCL promotes the sale of book covers in the fall and spring for all students at South Side. This project allows the club to have the Latin Banquet in the spring, at which all of the members appear for singing, eating, and conversing in a Latin atmosphere of self-styled Roman togas and tunics created from sheets and remnants.

The rules of the club state that members must be in either third or fourth-year Latin and that five officers are to be chosen each semester to guide JCL members. For the first semester they were president, Ted Warfel; vice president, Dave Langdon; secretary, Ann Hoard; treasurer, Sally Aldridge; and sergeant-at-arms, Tom Rehrer.

With unique ideas, the beginning artists at South Side created their expressions under the direction of Mrs. Barbara Thexton. The Art Club welcomed all students who were interested in the various forms of art.

The members enjoyed guest speakers who discussed commercial printing and art work in Fort Wayne. The club donated money to the Riverhaven Redevelopment area. With this money, food was purchased for needy persons at Christmas time. During the month of December, the members visited the Fort Wayne Art Museum and concluded their Christmas festivities at Ma and Pa's Ice Cream Parlour. The members conducted the annual Art Auction to raise money for supplies for the Art department.

Illuminating certain aspects of history beckons South Side students to the History Club. Sponsored by Mr. Arthur Peffley, the club had speakers lecturing on a sketch of Hebrew history, and a view of World War II as seen from the ground. The members leading this organization were president, Jon Zorn; vice president, Jane Tagtmeyer; and secretary-treasurer, Laura Leffers.

Unlike most other clubs, the Distributive Education Club was co-curricular. As a part of the Distributive Education course, it combined social activity with learning.

The DE course was a two-year program. Juniors studied retailing, the fundamentals of selling, and business procedures. The seniors' schedule was unique; the first three periods were used to teach advertising, display, retail credit, and retail communications and mathematics. For the second half of the day, each student was placed in a job to receive direct training corresponding with the topics he was studying that semester.

The club was the third phase of the Distributive Education course. The members met on the first and third Thursday evenings of each month. Leading the club were the officers, president, Tim Matthias; vice-president, Kathy Mosher; associate vice-president, Bruce Bennett; secretary, Debra Edelman; and treasurer, Cliff Setser.

The sponsor of the new club was Mr. Robert Wray. In accordance with his challenging teaching activities, Mr. Wray was also voted Teacher of the Year in Indiana.

Senior Cathy Stookey is able to display the store's merchandise in a qualified manner through firsthand experience and the instruction of her Distributive Education courses. Knowledge from past business courses benefits a DE student when approaching a customer properly.

Senior Gail Sherav efficiently checks out this customer's purchases at the local grocery store where she works daily and on Saturdays.

Journalism, National Merit recognize seniors

The graduating Archer seniors who were selected as National Merit Finalists are Front Row: Fichman, Levy, Cole, DeVore. Second Row: Langdon, Zorn, Jones, Rea. Third Row: Turnlev, Kaplan, Fay, Ball.

Choosing the 19 members of the South Side Chapter of Quill and Scroll, the International Journalism Honor Society for high school seniors, was South Side's publications adviser, Miss Anne White.

To be eligible for membership in this society, each Kelly senior had been active on the Times for two years or on the Totem for one year. Members also ranked in the upper third of their graduating class and had accumulated 5000 points for active work in publications.

Members of this society were eligible for the Rowena Harvey Award, presented to a senior journalist.

South Side totaled 12 National Merit Finalists. With such a high number of finalists, South ranked first in Allen County and second in Indiana as the school with the greatest number of finalists.

Each of these finalists took a qualifying test in his junior year of high school and received the standing of semi-finalist upon the announcement of his test scores. Upon becoming finalists, the 12 seniors were eligible for the various Merit scholarships offered by colleges.

Quill and Scroll members are Front Row: Hagerman, McVay, Mittelstadt, Schmitz, Burrow. Second Row: Hunt, Reichert, Eberly, Young, Lipp, DeVore, Fichman. Third Row: Kaplan, Langdon, Theye, Bolman. (Hoard, Inskeep, Kimbrough were not present.)

Anne,

I just got to know you this year, and to think after next year I won't be around you or anybody in your class seems too short-lived. I hope you practice tennis alot so you can give me some competition, then we can play at the Country Club. Don't practice too much cause you can already almost beat me!? I can't forget golf either - practice that too so we can "crack out the sticks", O.K? As I look back on the date we had after the Snider game, I can remember everything vividly — you wore orange, etc. Maybe the next time I'll be a little smarter because I think we could have done better. I wrote on this page because you're one of my best "lookers." You've got the greatest personality to go along with your looks so be careful that you get whatever you really want, O.K? Oh, I almost forgot to tell you that that was a

Principal, vice-principal face challenging days

Principal Jack E. Weicker works hard each day in his office in order to keep South Side functioning smoothly. His hours are filled by numerous appointments with students, teachers, visitors from businesses and colleges, and by important phone calls.

Obstacles and achievements must be faced with equal sureness and poise in a public institution, and two men perform these tasks for South Side. Neither Principal Jack E. Weicker's nor Assistant Principal Richard E. Block's job is an easy one, yet each meets the challenge of daily and long-term problems with an enthusiasm and confidence which inspire the faculty and the entire student body in their own school duties.

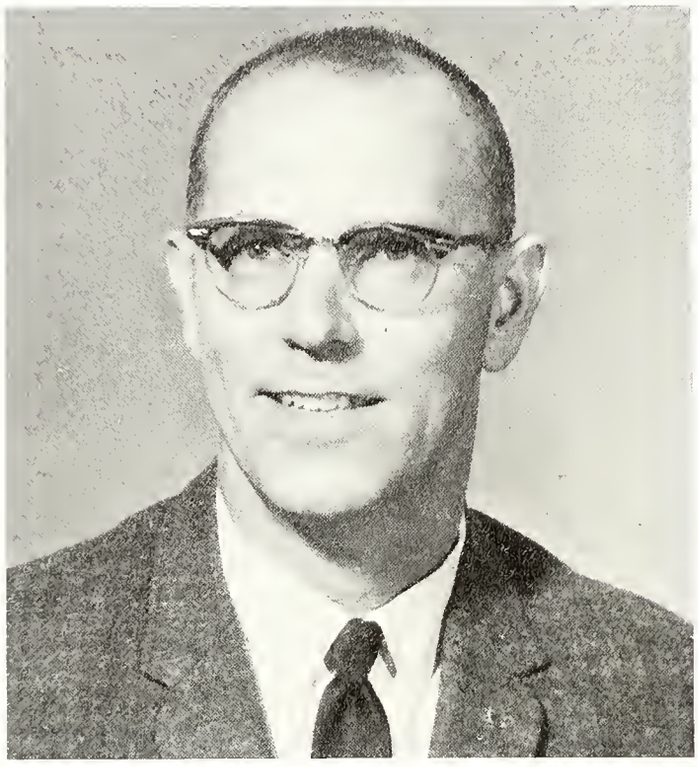
Mr. Weicker has been chief administrative officer for five years and is recognized throughout the school and the community as a competent and respected educator. He is deeply involved with every phase of life at South Side from okaying pep sessions to advising students, parents, and teachers on academic and extra-curricular matters.

An able assistant to the principal is Mr. Block. The experience he gained in his former position as dean of students has fortified him in his continuing duties in the field of academic guidance and counseling. This year found him still spending time aiding seniors with their college plans and helping with the administration of the various college entrance tests.

The school offices on the second floor are kept in effective operation by four personable secretaries, Mrs. Sylvia Christon; Miss Nancy Liby; Mrs. Linda Grimmett; and Mrs. Rene Nonneman. The doors at the head of the ramp are always open to students, teachers, and visitors who need information on any aspect of the school.

Mr. Richard E. Block, assistant principal, also serves with Miss Graham as a guidance counselor for college-bound senior students.

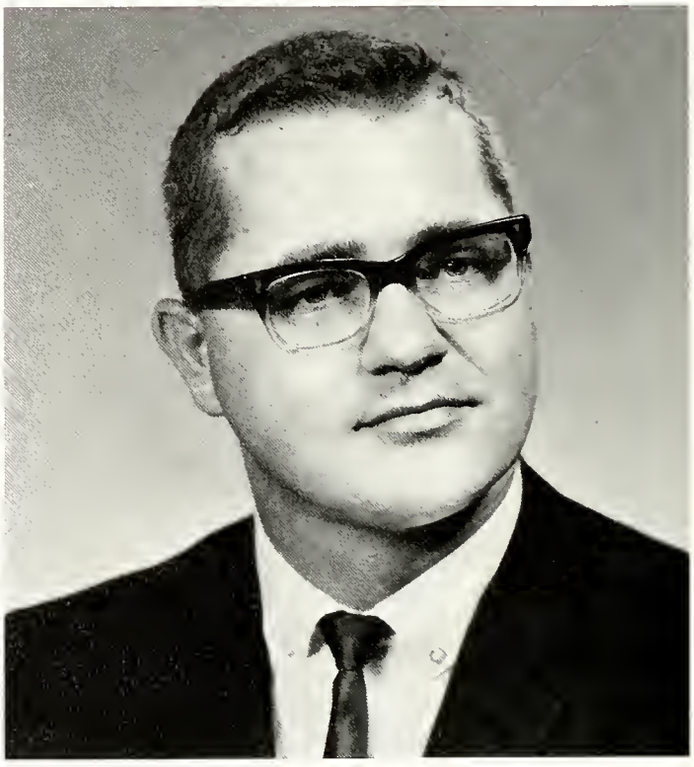
Guidance staff interviews sophomores, juniors;



Mr. Ralph Boling has been in charge of the conduct of Archer boys for the past two years in his post as dean of boys and counselor.

New dean of girls this year is Mrs. Mary Smith. Her difficult job has been to counsel the whole student body and administer policy.

Miss Mary Graham was a long-time member of the English department before she took on the duties of college counseling this year.



Guidance co-ordinator Thomas Gordon's function is to aid students in the vocational fields and in finding jobs and training positions.

advises seniors on college, further education

Mr. Clarence Murray is also an addition to the guidance staff this year in the areas of vocational guidance and sophomore counseling.

Mr. Wayne Scott serves the school as sophomore guidance counselor and as the director of athletic programs connected with the school.

The administrative offices hum with activity every school day, and often lamps burn at night to keep South Side functioning as an outstanding high school. Six guidance counselors serve the student body, two of them as deans of the 2029 attending Archers.

Mrs. Mary Smith, a new dean, has the responsibility of guiding girls and setting standards for their behavior and dress. In the spring at Senior Recognition time, it is Mrs. Smith's honor to choose the Spirit of South Side and a court from her junior service workers to help with the presentation of senior awards. Mrs. Smith also schedules social activities through the year. Her counterpart among the boys is Mr. Ralph Boling who is completing his second year as dean of boys.

The man who helps those interested in vocational careers and job placement is Mr. Thomas Gordon, new this year as guidance co-ordinator. Mr. Gordon came to South from the faculty of Ben F. Geyer. Miss Mary Graham, now the counselor for college-bound students, formerly was a member of the English faculty here at South Side.

This exceptional staff also includes two sophomore counselors, Mr. Clarence Murray and Mr. Wayne Scott. Mr. Murray is a former industrial arts department head, and Mr. Scott serves as athletic director in addition to his administrative duties. Together, these two men organize and carry out the individual interviewing of all the incoming sophomore students.

The guidance office staff and secretary, Mrs. Edna Jones (top left) are at work discussing daily problems and consulting over the phone.

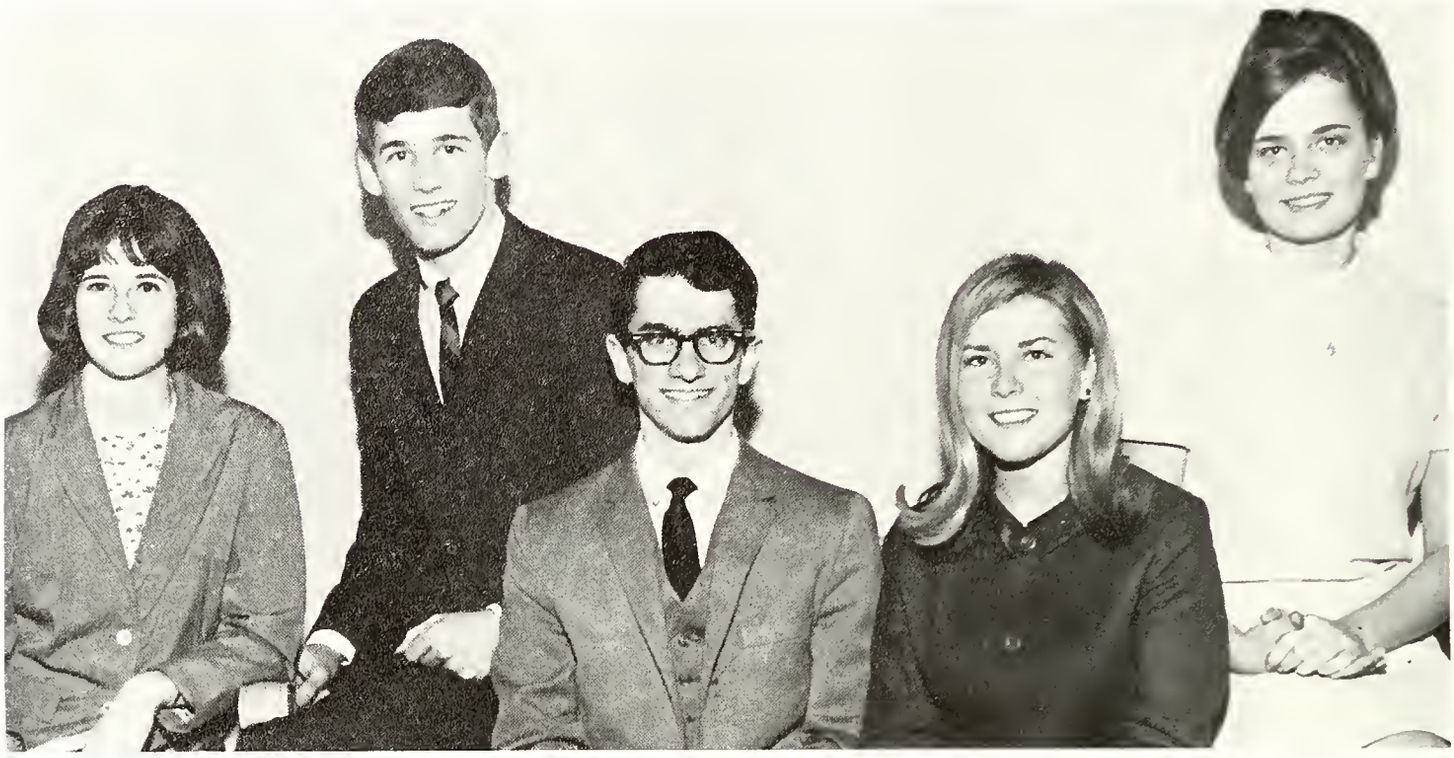
Seniors begin terminating year of high school



Cheerful senior class officers Cindy Gidley, social council member; Chuck Fay, social council chairman; Warren Cole, president; Sheryl Nelson, secretary-treasurer; and Lydia Hallay, social council member, discuss and plan a variety of social activities for their final year.

Numbering remaining senior days on worn notebooks, homeroom blackboards, or mental calendars, nearly 600 Kellys anticipated graduation in June. But eagerness was not the only feeling for graduation. Mixed emotions were exposed as one remembered sophomore blunders or the Junior Prom. Uncertainty appeared as each student realized that he had to decide his own future—whether he would enter business, continue his education, or join the military forces. These realizations were emphasized by the Senior Reception and Recognition Day and were finalized by Baccalaureate and Commencement.

These same seniors had entered South Side in 1965 from six different junior highs and had regrouped their friendships and interests into a body supporting championship-caliber athletic teams and participating in extra-curricular activities. Sponsors and officers stressed the personal value of each class function and recruited class ingenuity in choosing themes such as 'Sophomore Scene', 'Try to Remember', and 'As Years Go By' for the Sophomore Party, Junior Prom, and Senior Banquet.

Class resources were also called on for the interpretation of Twelve Angry People, the drama chosen for the 1968 Senior Play. Tryouts were held with Mrs. Mary Crum, and the play was produced for the public in April.

across country, Archers plan coming studies

Chemistry students Scott Lougheed and Cindy Shireman gaze with avid interest at the laboratory technique of a fellow chemistry student.

Gloria McVay, Cari Small, Bob Wright, Judy Hoffman, and Robin Hoffman discover that ramps are avenues of both fun and transportation.

Senior Don Beardsley looks past South Side and his high school education to plan a future that will help him to meet his ambitions.

The Junior class officers are Sally Aldridge, social council member; Scott Shoalf, social council member; Steve Brookhart, social council chairman; Jean Dunlap, secretary-treasurer; Randy Wamsley, vice-president, and Rex Melchi, president.

Juniors choose competent officers, interested

This year proved to be an awkward and informative year for members of the Junior Class. They found themselves in the middle of everything, and yet they managed to come out with flying colors.

They found that as high school progressed, the going got a lot tougher. Subjects such as botany, physics, Macbeth, and the dreaded term paper filled much of the time of the "Middies". With the end of high school drawing nearer, the Juniors had to start thinking about college. Tests such as the PSAT, the NMSQT, and in some cases, the SAT, aided the members of the middle class in formulating their plans for college entrance.

In addition to the vast array of curricular subjects, there was a host of extra-curricular activities open to members of the Junior class. Such clubs as Philo, Hi-Y, Wranglers, and Assemblies Workshop were just a few of the clubs that Juniors participated in. The eleventh graders also proved to be a great help to the coaches as they participated in many of the sports programs at South Side.

The first event of the year was the election of officers and the choosing of sponsors. Rex Melchi was chosen to lead the class, while Randy Wamsley was elected vice-president. Jean Dunlap was elected secretary-treasurer, and Steve Brookhart was designated as the social council chairman. The two social council members were Scott Shoaff and Sally Aldridge. Mr. Don Locke, Mr. Robert Petty, and Mrs. Barbara Thexton were chosen as sponsors.

Perhaps the greatest tribute paid to the Juniors can be taken from the banquet theme, "Green Years". After this year, the Junior Class isn't quite so "green" anymore.

Energetic officers direct sophomores through

Mr. Tom Lindenberg, Miss Barbara Schneider, and Mrs. Dorothy Brutton, class sponsors, take time to make plans for the class party.

Upon entering South Side for the first time, the class of 1970 immediately tackled the responsibilities of being Archers. As a group, they combined their efforts for the canned-food drive, yell contests, and Sophomore Party. Also, they joined to elect their class officers at the beginning of the second semester. As individuals, they captured places on the Top Scholar Board, Honor Roll, and athletic teams. They rapidly learned that their new life was going to be an exciting and different one, and they directed their time toward its many channels. No matter what the task, they accepted it with true Archer enthusiasm.

The sophomores soon discovered that their high school courses were not going to be easy. One of their first decisions was whether to enroll on a Business or College Preparatory Course. From there, the youngest Archers delved into the thematic implications of Silas Marner, the characterizations of Julius Caesar, and the events which have become our world history. Some of the students tested their verbal skills in the language lab, and all had the chance to improve their reading through Developmental Reading.

Two other aspects of high school life also took on new importance and meaning: athletics and extra-curricular activities. The sophs arrived in large support for their first Archer teams; they showed that they could yell as loudly as any of the upperclassmen. Many of these Kellys discovered that an outside organization gave them a break from schoolwork and a chance to develop a hobby. The annual Sophomore Party, organized by officers and advisers, was also deemed a success by those attending.

Parents lend homes for typing, proofing book

Like most good experiences, the production of the 1968 Totem involved hard work. It demanded time beyond a service hour in the Times Room and effort beyond a hurried attempt to finish. Perhaps the most difficult task exacted by this publication is the attempt to express thank yous worthy of the contributions they represent.

Carrying ideas and supplies, Mr. Frank Woschitz travveled frequently to Fort Wayne to assist the staff and to transport deadline shipments. We wish to thank him and Paragon Press for the interest taken in the details of our book. Our thanks also go to Watters Studio which remained patient with our last-minute rushes, to the S. K. Smith Company which constructed our covers, and to all our parents who sometimes slept as little as we when we settled into their homes for night work.

Our strongest thanks to Miss Anne White who, through granting us our positions, exposed us to the creativity experienced in good copy, the control required after the discovery of an alphabetizing error, the post-midnight laughter incited by exhausted minds, and the understanding realized through cooperative effort.

A

Annie,
There's so much to say that I don't even know where to begin. I don't have to tell you that we've had barrels of fun, etc. because you know that. It's only one thing, we've sure had gotten into enough trouble together this year. Remember for three times in a row I was late to the Cafeteria and I had to stand up. (Two of which you were there by my side.) How 'bout the time I threw you a piece of gum and I got caught. The teacher was mad and I couldn't quit laughing. This summer is going to be so much fun. We'll have to get a bench of girls and go to the drive-in. (That sounds queer.) There is one thing I hate 'bout the club - Steve Knight - Mr. cool (ick) Oh boy! Next year will be so queer. We'll all be hard up and probably turn into another knettle. Heaven forbid! I really hope everything works out for you (you know what I mean).

Love,
Nell Wilkins

PS Forgot to tell you that next fall we're going to redecorate my bedroom & bathroom, plus I get my own sweet telephone.

There's so much I wanted to say about your dress but I'm in a hurry to get to school. I'll see you at recess. Remember when you smiled for me & I'll do the same for you. Good luck in your next 2 years. P.S.

Keep something inside it.

Dear Annie,

Thanks a million for the letter. I'm glad you like your dress. Mother made it. Yes, I'm glad you're going to be in my room next year. I'm looking forward to it. Maybe we can be seatmates. Mother says I can't have company over on school nights, but I'll ask her if you can come over on Saturday. Maybe you can stay all night. Mother says I can't have company over on school nights, but I'll ask her if you can come over on Saturday. Maybe you can stay all night.

Annie -
History was going to be a drag this year, but it looks like it's going to be fun. I'm glad that I'm in your room. Remember when I saw you in the cafeteria? I was so embarrassed. I can't wait to see you next year. Maybe we can be seatmates. Mother says I can't have company over on school nights, but I'll ask her if you can come over on Saturday. Maybe you can stay all night.

Next to you I'm the best looking girl in the class. Only kidding. I'm glad that we're going to be in the same room. Remember when I saw you in the cafeteria? I was so embarrassed. I can't wait to see you next year. Maybe we can be seatmates. Mother says I can't have company over on school nights, but I'll ask her if you can come over on Saturday. Maybe you can stay all night.

For a great girl. Thanks a million for the letter. It was really good. Don't forget to write me next summer. Maybe you can come to visit me. Mother says I can't have company over on school nights, but I'll ask her if you can come over on Saturday. Maybe you can stay all night.

With you I don't have to sit because I'm not going to be going steady with anyone else. Maybe you'll be going steady with me.

Well, its that time of year again and I kinda hate to see it come. We've really had a tremendous year as Soph's and I hope we'll have many more. (Not as soph's though!) I wish I could begin to list the fun we've had, but there's too much. We can really have a riot in Qui Vive next year telling all those spikes what ~~to~~ do. We'll have to get together more this summer and we can drive all over town (Hah!) I really have enjoyed knowing you since 6th grade and I wish we could be even better friends than we've been. Anne, you're really a doll and you'll be a big success anywhere you go. Keep your chin up with ___; things will look up next year. Stay your sweet self and keep your great personality.

Best of Luck Always.

God Bless you, Anne.

(Original beginning!) It has really been fun knowing you [especially at South] and I'm sure that the next to years are going to be great! (Maybe next year we will be lucky in center hall!) I hope this summer will be a riot - with everybody going to Europe there has to be a lot of vacancies! Good luck at South next year & always! Keep singing!

It has really been a riot - hasn't it? Remember when I was so jealous about ___! HA! Believe me- never again! I really envy you - first of all you're from Ohio, you're darling, great personality, great bod, beautiful smile, I think you are the coolest soph girls I you have everything going for you. I better see you this summer - on 2nd though - I don't know if I want to see that cool bod in a bathing suit. I'm running out of room so I better close. Remember - if you see you're "good" little friend with another not so "good" little friend - keep your chin up - it will work out for the best! Bonne Chance Toujours
